Income Tax—Public

WASHINGTON (AP) — You might not have believed this last April 15, but a poll has concluded that the federal income tax is Americans' first choice as the fairest revenue levy.

The local property tax was rated in the same government-sponsored poll as the least fair.

But the 2,195 persons interviewed as a sample of the nation's taxpayers apparently think the income tax could be improved on.

They were asked what would be the best way to raise substantially more money, if the federal government were forced to do so.

The preferred method was to close tax loopholes, even to the extent of cutting "little people's" preferences such as deductions for charity, local taxes and medical expenses.

Some 40 per cent expressed this view, as against 34 per cent who voted for a value-added tax, a form of national sales tax, and 10 per cent who would raise income tax rates.

The poll was commissioned by the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations. President Nixon assigned to this group, largely made up of members of Congress and local officials the task of developing recommendations on ways of relieving the property tax burden. It is to report later this year.

At one time the Nixon administration indicated great interest in the value-added tax, but it appeared to have backed away somewhat.

The poll findings, if they really represent public opinion, could provide support for a proposal by leading congressional Democrats to bring up nearly all tax preferences over a three-year period for reconsideration and repeal unless Congress decides to keep them.

The pollsters offered those interviewed a choice of methods to help reduce local property taxes. In the replies, 32 per cent opted for the value-added tax, 14 per cent for an increase in individual income taxes. But 44 per cent said the government should do neither.

Search For Hijacker

PERU, Ind. (AP)—A sport coat found by a farmhand plowing a cornfield apparently was the only new clue Wednesday in the search for a missing skyjacker.

The FBI said the coat resembles one believed worn by the skyjacker, who jumped or fell from an American Airlines Boeing 727 jetliner over north central Indiana Saturday.

Meanwhile, an American Airlines official said a check for an undisclosed amount was being given to a Peru farmer who found the moneybag containing $500,000 ransom given the hijacker.

Police said a brownish gold two-button sport coat was found late Tuesday afternoon by Alvin Chalk of Kokomo near the southeast edge of nearby Grisom Air Force Base.

Chalk, a farmhand for Richard Obernier of Kokomo, said he drove over the coat with his tractor. He turned it over to the Indiana State Police, who gave it to the FBI.

State police said there were no laundry marks or any other visible clues on the jacket that might aid in the search.

The money was discovered in a soybean field Monday by farmer Lowell Elliott.

S.P. Fay, American Airlines manager in Indianapolis, said Wednesday a company representative was going to Peru to give Elliott a check as a reward.

Fay said Wednesday there apparently was a misunderstanding and that an earlier offer of an expense-paid trip "anywhere" was "only in addition to any monetary expression of thanks we want to give him."

Daley—McGovern

CHICAGO (AP) — The National Broadcasting Co. reported Wednesday that Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley and a top aide to Sen. George McGovern met in Washington in an effort to resolve the challenge to Daley and 58 other uncommitted Chicago delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

NBC said it learned that Daley met Wednesday with Frank Mankiewicz, McGovern's national political coordinator, in the office of Rep. Daniel J. Rostenkowski, D-Ill.

Mankiewicz reportedly asked Daley what could be done to keep the 70-year-old Democratic leader from refusing to support McGovern, the network said.

Daley replied that he was convinced that the 59 challenged delegates were entitled to their seats because they were elected by the people in a primary election.

Daley reportedly told Mankiewicz he is confident the courts would rule in his favor.

The meeting apparently resulted from Daley's remarks at a news conference Tuesday that he would be agreeable to discuss the challenge dilemma, which Democrats label the most controversial issue before them, with McGovern's staff.

Meanwhile, Chicago alderman William S. Singer, leader of the challengers to Daley and his delegates, said in Washington there will be no compromise on his part and he added that Daley is too rigid in his position, NBC said.

Economic Indicators

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's leading economic indicators for May gained only slightly, pointing to a possible slowdown in economic activity, a Commerce Department report showed Wednesday.

A Commerce Department analyst said no one should pay too much attention to the small increase. But the composite index of leading indicators increased by only 0.2 per cent over April, the worst performance in a year.

On top of that, the April advance of 1.4 per cent in the index was revised downward to 0.9 per cent.

Harold C. Passer, assistant commerce secretary for economic affairs, said the small increase in May does not change the fact that the strong upward trend has been under way in the index since October 1970.

"Thus, the index continues to signal that strong economic growth is ahead," Passer said.

Miami's Police Chief
Given Power Increase

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Miami Beach City Council gave Police Chief Rocky Pomerance power Wednesday to declare states of emergency and curfews during the presidential nominating conventions but retained the right to veto his actions.

The emergency ordinance provided that if Pomerance should proclaim a state of emergency, the mayor or city manager would call the council into session to determine if his action was justified. If not, they reserved the power to terminate it.

One other ordinance, permitting the formation of police lines during riots or unlawful assemblies, was adopted but the council threw out eight additional proposed statutes. The vote on both approved ordinances was a unanimous 6-0.

The action came after the council listened to a long procession of fearful citizens. Most pleaded for more power and guns for police against an anticipated invasion by thousands of protesters.

One after another expressed fear for the safety of the city's 80,000 permanent residents. Finally, Hall broke in to tell them that Miami Beach had the "finest police force in the world."

"It's bad for people to talk constantly about riots and blood and fire," Hall said. "These people coming here aren't murderers."

Ten tough police ordinances were on the agenda, but the council voted to consider only two—the curfew and giving police the power to setup lines around trouble areas.

Women Claim Credit
For New Irish Truce

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The petticoat peace-makers of Northern Ireland claim to have done what the British army never could in three years of violence—force guerrilla outlaws to lay down their guns.

The Provisional wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army began an indefinite cease-fire Monday following a surge of peace protests led by war-weary women. The peace revolt among Roman Catholic women in the staunch IRA strongholds of Belfast and Londonderry was a major reason for the guerrillas' decision.

The women braved threats and insults from the gunmen and their sympathizers. Some underwent the traditional tar-and-feather punishment often meted out to women who defy the IRA or fraternize with British soldiers.

About 25 women have died in the sectarian fighting that has torn Northern Ireland. Hundreds more have been injured in bomb blasts and gun battles. Hospitals report a major increase in nervous disorders among women of the province and thousands more weather the tension on tranquilizers.

A major force behind the staff diplomacy that disarmed the gunmen was "Women Together," a unique group of Protestant and Catholic women who began to press for peace 18 months ago.

"Our group has made a great contribution to the cease-fire but our work is far from finished," said their leader, Monica Patterson, a Belfast Protestant. "There is a massive job of reconciliation to be done and we will be at the forefront of this."

Philomena McGovern, a housewife from the Catholic Andersonstown district of Belfast, said: "Women generally have played a big part in bringing about the cease-fire. We spoke out when others kept quiet."

Five women sparked the profusion of peace protests in the IRA's Londonderry citadel two months ago. The emotional intensity of that revolt stunned the gunmen and made them realize the escalating violence was eroding their support.

U.S. Senate, American Public
Rush To Aid Of Flood Victims

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The United States Senate has come to the aid of flood victims in eight hard hit Eastern states. So has a violinist in Oklahoma City. So overwhelming has been the national good will that some areas were flooded again Wednesday—this time by supplies.

"The problem has become one of storage and distribution," said an official of the New York State Civil Defense in Albany. "We have tons of supplies coming into the flood area but no place to store the material and no way to distribute it unless people come to us."

Instead of food, clothing and the like, the American Red Cross suggested cash donations for flood victims—the money's easier to distribute and enables families to buy what they need most.

In line with this, the Senate voted on Wednesday $200 million in emergency flood aid—twice what President Nixon had requested. It can be used for such things as road and bridge repairs in an area from South Carolina to New York, which was devastated by last week's heavy rains and Tropical Storms Agnes.

The White House said the additional relief funds also could be used to aid victims of an earlier flood in Rapid City, S.D. New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and Florida have been declared disaster areas, making them liable for long term federal aid. Agnes first struck as a full-fledged hurricane the weekend of June 17 at Florida, and before the floods ended last Sunday 125 lives had been lost. Damage totaled well above $1 billion.

The violinist who did his bit for flood victims in Oklahoma City was Javon Javonovich, who said the Red Cross helped him when he was a German refugee in World War II. So he gave a benefit concert Sunday, collecting $1,526 for the Oklahoma Red Cross chapter which is trying to raise $25,000 for Eastern flood victims.

There were other contributors large and small.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon slowed the Vietnam withdrawal rate Wednesday—to 10,000 troops over two months—but said draftees no longer will be sent to the war zone unless they volunteer.

Nixon's action will cut U.S. force levels in South Vietnam to 39,000 by Sept. 1. This compares with a peak ceiling of 549,500 when he took office. The 39,000 figure does not take into account about 87,000 participating in the war from Thailand and the 7th Fleet off Vietnam.

In May and June, troops were pulled out at the rate of 10,000 a month, but with the remaining force getting ever smaller and Hanoi's army continuing its Southern offensive, Nixon opted for a go-slower approach at this time.

Press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said some 4,000 draftees already in South Vietnam, or with those holding current orders to go there would not be affected by Nixon's decision to restrict war-zone service to drafted volunteers and regulars.

The White House spokesman said he had nothing new to report on the search for a negotiated Vietnam settlement.

However, he announced that Nixon will hold a television-radio news conference in the East Room of the White House, Thursday night—a session at which the subject is certain to arise.

The President's news conference is scheduled for 9 p.m. (Turn To Page Eight) (See "Pullouts")

Rules Hassle

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Democrats wrangled over new party rules Wednesday while Sen. George McGovern offered a gesture to the South as he sought to assemble the delegate strength for first-ballot presidential nomination.

McGovern said in Atlanta that it may be time to alter the seven-year-old voting-rights act to apply more current criteria in determining which states are subject to its terms.

The Associated Press count of delegate votes put McGovern at 1,367.9 of the 1,509 needed for nomination.

By McGovern's own count, he is within 20 votes of the prize.

In Washington, Democratic members of the House repudiated a plan for an overhaul of the party organization. They adopted, 150 to 50, a resolution saying the new charter is "not in the best interests of the Democratic party."

The new charter, to be presented next month to the national convention in Miami Beach, would supplant the current national committee structure with an expanded national party dominated by locally elected members.

That would strip party leaders and Democratic office holders of their current dominance.

At the same time, McGovern forces in the Democratic credentials committee won realignment of the Georgia delegation to the national convention.

The vote was 72 to 59 to put 17 new members, representing 10.5 convention nominating votes, on the Georgia delegation. The change was made on grounds that some districts were malapportioned, some Democrats denied easy access to polling places, and that state officials illegally fielded a slate of uncommitted delegates at the state convention.

The credentials committee ruled that this violated reform rules requiring full representation for women, blacks and young people.

All told, Georgia will cast 53 nominating votes in Miami Beach.

The Credentials Committee whittled away at a mass of challenges with decisions still to come on the big ones—a California challenge to be decided Thursday and an Illinois dispute Friday.

In the California one, challengers led by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota seek to strip McGovern of 150 delegates. McGovern won all 271 California convention votes by defeating Humphrey in the June 6 primary. Humphrey now contends the winner-take-all system is in violation of reform rules, and that the delegates should be apportioned among candidates on the basis of their shares in the primary vote.

McGovern forces concentrated on defeating that challenge, which loomed as perhaps the last major obstacle to his nomination. They got a boost in a preliminary report which said California did not violate reform commission requirements, but left it to the full committee to decide.

WASHINGTON: Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, testifying Thursday before a House Judiciary subcommittee hearing on proposed strong handgun control legislation, urged Congress to "take the guns away from every private person." Daley, shown talking with newsmen after his testimony, said lobbying efforts of the National Rifle Association were a major reason why there is not yet a "strong gun control law." (UPI Telephoto)

Reins On Wiretapping

It is gratifying that the Supreme Court has so resoundingly outlawed the federal government's surveillance of domestic "subversives" by wiretapping without benefit of a warrant. This 8 to 0 decision is a welcome affirmation that we must still be guided by the Fourth Amendment strictures against invasion of citizens' privacy without a specific order of approval from a court.

This is the essence of the matter—that court approval is required to justify wiretapping of telephones used by individuals or groups the government finds suspicious. Associate Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. neatly summed up the point in the decision he wrote for the court: "Fourth Amendment freedoms cannot properly be guaranteed if domestic surveillances may be conducted solely within the discretion of the executive branch."

It is worthwhile to look at the constitutional language on which the court's view is based. The Fourth Amendment says, in its entirety: "The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized."

The courts of the electronic age have not always construed this to extend to wiretapping. Not until 1967 did the Supreme Court rule that warrant requirements applied to electronic surveillance. Even then the situation was not fully clarified.

The present case is an outgrowth of the 1968 law authorizing wiretaps, under court warrant, in a variety of investigations. Congress excluded from the warrant requirement whatever authority the president had under the constitution to use wiretaps in national security cases. The Justice Department took the course of considering that this applied not only to foreign agents but also to persons it considered domestic subversives or radicals.

It is here that the Supreme Court has put its foot down, insisting that there is an essential difference. In this we heartily concur, and we approvingly quote from the ruling: "History abundantly documents the tendency of government—however benevolent and benign its motives—to view with suspicion those who most fervently dispute its policies. The price of lawful public dissent must not be a dread of subjection to an unchecked surveillance power. Nor must the fear of unauthorized official eavesdropping deter vigorous citizen dissent and discussion of government action in private conversations."

Of Irish And Arabs

Ireland's long dark night of fear and hatred is beginning to break. The Irish peoples—all types of them—are turning away from the past, are beginning to recognize the possibility that even Irish Roman Catholics and Ulster Protestants can be brought to see the common humanity in each other and learn to live peaceably in the same community.

The reconciliation is not complete. But when the "IRA Provos," the irreconcilables on the Catholic side, accept a ceasefire then a very long step toward peace has been achieved. That step has been the prime goal of William Whitelaw since he started a mere three months ago to apply his proposed remedy to the "Irish problem." It is that step which converts an earnest hope for peace into a practical possibility of peace.

At this point in the long tragic story of Ireland it is, we think, of first importance to be clear about how and why Mr. Whitelaw has been able to get so far, so quickly. He has done it by tackling the problem at its original root cause; that deep, gnawing sense of injustice which Irish have felt ever since the English first came across the Irish Sea back, literally, in the year 1177.

In Irish eyes the Protestant government at Stormont was the surviving remnant of centuries of an effort to impose by force an alien rule and an alien culture on the native people of Ireland. It meant unfairness and injustice. Not until Stormont was dissolved would the Irish believe that they could obtain equal justice in Ulster.

Mr. Whitelaw was the instrument by which the British Government in London dissolved Stormont and set out to persuade the Catholic minority of Ulster that it could enjoy justice without resort to terror.

The Irish problem is yielding now because Mr. Whitelaw has tackled the sense of injustice which lay at the heart of the problem. He is drawing the poison out of the Irish peoples.

Someday this lesson will be applied to the Middle East. The time is not ripe. There is as yet no reconciliation in sight between Jew and Arab. Fear and hatred still dominate the relations between the Arab states and Israel.

Behind the intractableness of the Middle East problem is the same deep, gnawing sense among Arabs of being the victims of injustice. It is as strong among the Palestinian refugees as it ever was among Ulster Catholics. The Arab guerrillas are the Middle East counterpart of the IRA terrorists. A sense of injustice begot both. Only a removal of the cause of the sense of injustice can draw the poison which still makes a settlement in the Middle East unattainable, now.

But what is happening in Ireland shows what someday could happen in the Middle East—when men's hearts are ready.

France began suffering from atomic fallout even before carrying out her latest schedule of nuclear tests on remote Mururoa Island in the Pacific. Japan, the only nation to feel the effects of an atomic bomb touched off in anger, chose the Geneva disarmament conference as the platform from which to rebuke both France and China for their refusal to participate in the 25-nation conference which seeks to curb the world's arms race.

By also refusing to adhere to the 1963 treaty banning all nuclear tests except underground, the Japanese delegate charged, France and China are failing in their "minimum moral duty" as nuclear weapon states.
Fear of the radioactive particles, carried around the world by prevailing winds from nuclear tests in the atmosphere had been mounting for years before the United States, the Soviet Union and Britain agreed in 1963 to ban all but underground tests.

Voices Gain Strength

Voices of the critics gained new strength from the declaration of principles issued at the close of the United Nations

Environmental Conference in Stockholm on June 15.

It called for efforts toward "elimination and complete destruction" of nuclear and all other weapons of mass destruction.

Since the declaration of principles was approved by acclamation it required neither France nor China to go on record. The Chinese defended their own testing as defensive in character and complained because the declaration did not specifically repudiate biological and chemical warfare.

Both France and China have continued their nuclear tests despite the mounting pressure of public opinion among the non-nuclear nations.

Since the prevailing winds carry the nuclear fallout from west to east, it is the nations of Latin America that are the most exercised over French tests in the South Pacific. France long has enjoyed a special influence in Latin America and lately has sought to expand it through trade contacts and sale of French armaments, including the Mirage jet fighter.

Ministers condemn plans. Foreign ministers of Peru, Bolivia, Chile, Colombia and Ecuador have joined in a declaration condemning current French nuclear test plans.

Peru has threatened to cut diplomatic ties unless the tests are cancelled.

Other Latin American nations, including Mexico and Brazil, are considering adding their protests to those already on record. Vigorous protests also have come from New Zealand and Australia whose labor federations have ordered a boycott of French ships and planes.

Since both France and China claim national defense as the reason for building up their nuclear arsenals, an interesting question becomes defense against whom?

The answer in both cases is the Soviet Union.

Washington N.Y. Win Wraps It Up For McGovern

By BRUCE BLOSSAT
WASHINGTON (NEA) — Sen. George McGovern's pickup of more than 250 of New York's 278 delegates in that state's primary flooded out the last faint hopes of the Democratic party's stop-McGovern forces.

They never really had a chance anyway. The die has been cast for McGovern since May 16. On that date, Gov. George Wallace, while lying crippled from gunshot wounds, won primaries in Maryland and Michigan. The key significance of the moment, however, was the failure of Sen. Hubert Humphrey to get more than 16 per cent of the vote in Michigan, a huge labor state supposedly friendly to him.

Humphrey being Humphrey, he dragged himself to California, put on a smile over his fatigue, and began gamely battling for the state's 271 votes in the June 6 primary. He made a closer fight of it than polls hinted he could, but a week before the event it was apparent he didn't have the stuff to turn the tide around. It was all over.

In the short span from California to the New York primary, the McGovern managers decided to play it cautiously, and trimmed down their delegate claims. They earlier had mentioned 225 to 240 as a reasonable prospect, but suddenly began saying "around 200."

My own fourth delegate count, issued shortly after California, placed McGovern's New York potential at 245. With his proportionate share of the state committee-chosen at-large delegates, he got 257.

Just a handful went elsewhere, to the sidelined Sen. Edmund Muskie, to Rep. Shirley Chisholm of New York, to the uncommitted.

Humphrey had no New York slate at all. Next to his Michigan debacle, his failure to file in New York was the longest earlier proof that he was fading from contention. Headlines blaring "Humphrey Concedes New York to McGovern" did the 1968 nominee immense harm. What serious bidder for the nomination could pass up the nation's second biggest state, with the biggest delegate prize of all?

The rest of McGovern's winning total will flow to him fairly easily in the short time between now and the Miami Beach convention opening July 10. When a candidate's base is as large as his now is, it acts inevitably as a magnet, drawing in small additional numbers from state after state, in a steady stream.

Some hard-bitten party professionals will be tossing in the towel. If Chicago's Mayor Richard Daley can get any sizable portion of his challenged delegates (totaling upwards of 90) seated in the convention, the odds are good he'll take a big group to McGovern. But the senator probably can win without him.

Old pro John Bailey, who may command a dozen or so uncommitted Connecticut delegates, is not likely to be found in the wrong place. McGovern could get nearly all of Kansas' uncommitted 22, and young but savvy Gov. David Hall of Oklahoma is not going off on some tangent. He has 29 uncommitted votes to chip in.

Of course, there will be hold-outs. It is a common thing in nominating politics for some forces not to go with the evident winner. In McGovern's case, more than any in recent Democratic history, there are real misgivings about his electability in the fall. But the opposition will provide more noise than delegates.

Ann Landers: Ann's Wisdom, A Life-Saver

Dear Ann Landers: Do you ever wonder if your articles do any good? It might give you a lift to know that you saved my life. I was completely shattered when I picked up the downstairs phone and heard my husband make plans to meet my best friend. When he kissed me goodbye and said, "Don't wait up for me. It will be a late meeting," I thought my heart would break.

I collapsed in a chair and reached for a book, any book to take my mind off my misery. Several of your old columns fell out. I had clipped them from the Akron Beacon Journal. The first column I read was dated March 24, 1971. It was signed, "Territorial Imperative." The woman wrote, "Every man is vulnerable at some time during his life, no matter how faithful, strong and honorable. The most wonderful husband in the world can have feet of clay...."

I read that column over and over. It was as if someone had pulled the curtains and let the sunshine in. I told myself I could wait. I prayed for strength and patience.

I know for certain he will come back to me one day and when he does I will welcome him with open arms.

There must be thousands of women in your reading audience who will be faced with this problem sooner or later. Not all of them would choose this alternative. Some will shout, "Why put up with it? I'm going to throw the bum out!"

To those women I say, "Each of us must do what she feels is best for her and her family. I'm doing what is best for me and mine."

Thanks for your wisdom, Ann. You've been a life-saver. — I'll Make It New Dear Freind: Thanks for letting me know. Write again when you have some good news.

Dear Ann Landers: My boyfriend and his parents are planning a cross country trip in a trailer. He invited me to go along. There would be his parents, his sister, Josh and me. Josh and I are both 17. I asked my folks and they said it would be O.K.

Now Josh tells me his folks have changed their minds. I am very upset. My folks wonder what their reason was. Should they call Josh's folks and ask? — Disappointed

Dear Dis: No. Josh's folks should have called your folks and issued the invitation. Since they did not, you were not actually invited.

Dear Ann Landers: Yesterday I was missing some pudding for dessert. I ran out of milk. The market is about three blocks away. I slipped on a coat and dashed out to the market. It was about 5:00 p.m. and there were long lines. Most folks had lots of groceries. I got behind two women who had enormous loads. I waited patiently until the first lady got checked out and then I tapped the second lady on the shoulder and said, "I just have this one item — would you mind letting me through?" She looked at me with fierce anger in her eyes and shouted, "I am sick of you pushy Jews. Wait like everybody else!"

It so happens that I am not Jewish but that is beside the point. I FELT AS IF I had been slapped in the face. Please comment. — Still Unnerved.
Dear Still: I feel sorry for that woman, and others like her. What a tortured existence to be so full of hate. She must suffer a great deal.

In Saigon, 'Americans Are No. 10'

YANKEE GO HOME

By TOM TIEDE
SAIGON (NEA) —There is a monument in this city—appropriately next to a Chase Manhattan Bank advertisement—which reads: "The noble sacrifice of allied soldiers will never be forgotten."

Ah, these Vietnamese. Naughty, naughty. Already they tend to forget.

Nearly three million soldiers from a half-dozen nations have suffered 60,000 dead and 350,000 casualties in the last decade of the Vietnamese war. But the man in the street, if he acknowledges it at all, may just shrug: "Yes, but what have you done for us lately?"

Some here who are aware that several neighbors, such as Thailand and the Philippines, have contributed troops, dismiss it as insignificant. The Australians, they say, never did much either. And the Koreans, damn them, have just strutted about feeling superior.

As for the Americans—who did the most, who fought the most, who in effect purchased the entire allied commitment—as for them, well, "Americans No. 10," say many of the children of Saigon.

Vietnamese officials deny it. U.S. diplomats try desperately to explain it away, but the icy fact is that after all this time and all this blood the United States is unloved in this country. Women fear us, merchants cheat us, peasants ignore us, students deplore us. The $10 billion a year (on average) Americans have spent in this land has bought some cooperation, but neither respect nor appreciation.

"The only people who smile at me here are the beggars," says an Air Force colonel. "On the streets I feel like my forehead is marked."

The situation, call it anti-Americanism, was perhaps inevitable. Two-and-a-half million GIs have been in and out of Vietnam since 1961, plus thousands of sundry diplomats, civilian workers, newsmen and seekers of exotica. Few of them, with the occasional exception of diplomats, have strengthened any international bonds. It's not that the Yanks are so bad, just that they are different. Vietnamese women have never gotten used to being pinched on the boulevard and Vietnamese men have damn well never gotten used to seeing it happen.

The troops, perhaps, because of sheer numbers, have done the most to wrinkle the oriental brow. A drunk GI is hard to take in Galveston, much less Gia Dinh. Not long ago in Da Nang, a trooper from the 196th Light Infantry Brigade, tipsy of course, ran down a Vietnamese child with a truck. It was the last straw for the nationals of the area. Hundreds of angry locals stormed the truck, threatened the driver and hinted at open war. Indeed, it was war of a sort, and the 196th had to seal off the area, helicopter reinforcements in, and finally agree to pay retribution to the victim's father.

The same sort of thing is happening from the Delta to the DMZ. A newsman in Hue was recently set upon by three Vietnamese soldiers who stole his pack, his camera and his sunglasses. U.S. troops traveling through the off-limits town of Bien Hoa do so with guns loaded, cocked and pointing at anybody who comes near. A military policeman with the 504th recently lost a color television when he stopped his vehicle to avoid hitting a boy, then could not get going before a swarm of alerted nationals relieved him of his cargo. Fights. Shootings. Name it. The Nams are at the Yankees' throats.

Even the North Vietnamese spring offensive has not sobered the citizens' sentiments. Vernacular newspapers have hinted—good grief!—that the invasion was a CIA plot to "coldly test" South Vietnam's military mettle. And a young legislator, who knows better, says privately: "It wouldn't surprise me if Nixon and Mao (Tse-tung) have plotted out a coalition government for Saigon. The invasion could be the ploy to convince us that we can't stand by ourselves. Therefore we should hasten to accept any generous Hanoi offer of peace."

So it goes here. The walls of Hue University are covered with anti-American slogans ("American GIs eat water buffalo droppings"). An airline clerk in Pleiku tells a Yank traveler to "buy a ticket to My Lai." There are several urban slums where U.S. types walk at their own peril. "Not everybody here hates us," says an executive of a U.S. engineering firm, "some just don't care one way or the other."

Alas, the situation is sad. And maddening. And the forecast is the United States may spend the next decade here spending money trying to buy the friendship it lost spending money in the last. But, say the cynics, there is at least one hope to Vietnamese anti-Americanism:

"Maybe it's a sign. Maybe these people aren't passive after all. Maybe one day they'll hate their enemies as much as they do their friends."

NEW MINISTER FOR WHITE HALL METHODISTS

WHITE HALL — Rev. John P. Hamilton, began his duties as pastor of the First United Methodist church here last Sunday.

Rev. John Hamilton

Rev. Hamilton was born and raised on a farm in Champaign County near Gifford, Illinois and attended the grade school there. He moved to Rantoul in 1959, and graduated from the Township High School there in 1963, attending Kendall College, Evanston, Ill. He graduated from McKendree College, and while there, was named to "Who's Who" in American Colleges and Universities. During his senior year, he served as student assistant at the St. John United Church of Christ, Mascoutah.

In 1967, Rev. Hamilton began his studies at Garrett Theological Seminary, Evanston and served as assistant at the Pecos-Larson Larger Parish which consists of four rural churches in the Rockford area. He served as pastor of the United Methodist church of Nauvoo, Ill. and returned to Garrett for the 1971-72 school year and received the degree of Master of Divinity in the spring of 1962.

Mrs. Hamilton is the former Ruth Ann Hanes of Mt. Vernon and is also a graduate of McKendree College receiving an associate of arts degree from the Mt. Vernon Junior College. The couple have a daughter, Anne Elizabeth, eighteen months. A carry in supper was held Sunday night at the church for the new pastor and his family.

Plus Projects For 1972-73

At the first meeting of the 1972-73 Pilot club year held in the community room of Illinois Power Company Wednesday, June 14, members approved committee plans of work for the coming year, including a audit. The club will be under the direction of the community service committee. Each member will choose a person in a nursing home or home for the aged to whom she will render special services during the year. The club will continue its major project of Trees for Jacksonville,

THREE MEDICAL STUDENTS are getting a preview this summer of what their careers will be like if they decide to practice medicine in this community or similar ones. Pictured here with Dr. Francis Vincent, they are Miss Lois Lee and Anthony Molinari, both of Chicago, who have completed the freshman year at the University of Illinois School of Medicine, and Mark Stein of Skokie, who will be a junior this fall at the Tulane University School of Medicine in New Orleans.

The trio are participants in the Medical Education and Community Orientation (MECO) program, jointly sponsored here by the Passavant Hospital Association and the Illinois Medical Society, with Dr. Vincent as coordinator.

The program operates on a nation-wide basis, seeking to effect the redistribution of physician manpower by exposing students early in their medical training to community health care systems. Most students are placed in small-to-medium sized communities, in the hope that many eventually will practice in such areas.

Indications are that the program may achieve its objective. More than two-thirds of the students who participated during the summers of 1970 and 1971 have said they would like to practice medicine in conditions similar to those they observed on their MECO assignments.

After a week here, the three agreed that their strongest impressions of Jacksonville and the hospital so far stem from the friendly welcome they have received. "I didn't expect everyone to be so friendly," one added.

The ten-week MECO program includes one week of orientation, seven weeks of association with individual doctors in the hospital and in their offices, plus observation of all hospital departments, and two weeks of work in other community health care agencies.

TERRY DAVIS of Roodhouse, Secretary of State of Premier Boys State and Secretary of State John W. Lewis check Terry's certificate of office as he and other state officers of Boys State visited Lewis' office following their election.

JHS GRADUATE GIVEN READER'S DIGEST AWARD

Rachelan Blenert, highest grade point average student of the class of 1972 at Jacksonville High School, has been given the annual award of the Reader's Digest Association for students who by their successful school work give promise of attaining leadership in the community.

Miss Blenert will receive an honorary one-year subscription to the Reader's Digest in the language of her choice and a personal certificate from the editors "in recognition of past accomplishments and in anti-pation of unusual achievement to come."

The Reader's Digest Association is presenting these awards in senior high schools throughout the United States to the highest honor student of the graduating class.

The award to Miss Blenert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Blenert, 12 Newland Lane, was made possible through the cooperation of Bernard Gregory, principal at JHS, and his teaching staff. They selected Miss Blenert to receive the award, designed to stimulate scholarship, citizenship, and continued contact with good reading after graduation.

Waverly Man Earns Degree at Urbana

Waverly — Max Dunseth, son of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Dunseth, rural route Modesto, was among those graduating from the University of Illinois with a B.S. degree in chemistry. Max was named to the dean's list for both the first and second semester with a 5 point or straight A average the last semester.

to summer camp for a student in Parkway School. This committee includes Mrs. Bill, Miss Vae Rose Pultz, Mrs. Milton Stout, Miss Dorothy Lukeman and Mrs. Reid Lasley, chairman.

Other committees in the club which also presented new plans include finance, education and international relations, membership and Pilot information, patriotic emblems, and public relations. Headed by Mrs. Huber, the finance committee has as its members Mrs. Hugh Bradshaw, Mrs. Jean Spencer and Mrs. Stout, treasurer. The major fund-raising project this year is to be the two appearances of the United States Marine Band in concert Saturday, September 16, at Jacksonville High School gymnasium. Proceeds from the concerts will be spent in the city for the club's community service projects.

The work of the education and international relations committee and that of patriotic emblems is headed by Miss Louise Bancroft with Miss Zoe Marshall as committee member. They plan to collect and save stamps which will be sent to Norway for the benefit of children who are seriously ill, and to promote interest in voting, in the flag of our country and in United States savings bonds.

Share Pilot Meeting
As chairman of the membership and Pilot information committee, Mrs. Edward Morrison will be assisted by Mrs. Donald Wood and Miss Dorothy Lukeman. They are planning various types of membership promotion among which is a Share Pilot meeting scheduled for October.

Public relations will be directed by Mrs. Harry Smith, Miss Margaret Riley and Mrs. Samore, all of whom are making plans now for the coming of the Marine Band. All committee work is coordinated by the first vice-president, Mrs. R. J. Kaufmann, Sr.

In addition to the activities of the committees, the Pilot club gives financial support to Meals for Millions, Project HOPE, CARE, Inc., Save the Children federation, Ruby Newhall Scholarship fund, Pilot International Charitable and Educational foundation, and on the community level to the Jacksonville Tree Fund, Parkway School, United Fund, Tree of Lights, and American Field Service.

Waverly Man Jailed, Fined On Guilty Pleas

A 22-year-old Waverly young man was ordered to spend five days in the Morgan county jail and pay a fine of $150 on separate pleas of guilty to two offenses before Judge John B. Wright Wednesday morning. Ronald Lee Sittton pleaded guilty to reckless driving and was fined $150 and $10 costs, and resisting or obstructing a police officer and was ordered to spend five days in the county jail. He was remanded to the custody of the sheriff and taken to jail to serve his term.

Sittton was charged by Waverly police June 20 with reckless driving and reportedly had to be subdued by authorities following his arrest.

On Home Buying

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS
NEW YORK (UPI)—Two out of every three buyers select a used house—and the one out of three who buys a new house is likely to purchase one already built.

It's a choice each home buyer must make for himself, but whatever the choice, the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) has some good advice on "Wise Home Buying."

In a new booklet of that title—a handy pocket-size volume every house hunter would do well to ask for—HUD has suggestions on how to decide whether you are ready for a home, whether you can afford it, where to look for one, what to look for in a home, and your obligations once you own it.

Whether you decide on a new or an older home, "once you've found a house you like," HUD advises, evaluate it carefully. "You are buying the property 'as is' and you must literally live in as well as with your mistakes."

If it's an older home, HUD recommends a thorough inspection to reveal hidden defects—and obvious remodeling needs—and suggests if you have any doubts at all, a $50 or $100 fee for professional inspection will be money well spent. Wiring, heating, plumbing—particularly plumbing that includes a septic tank—are areas where expert advice is particularly helpful.

Check Your Experts
However, HUD warns, if you call in experts, first check their reputations and beware of unscrupulous operators who may justify their fee by exaggerating flaws which they may want to repair at inflated costs.

If it appears repairs and improvements are needed, have a clear understanding as part of any purchase agreement as to what the seller will pay for and what you will have to be responsible for.

HUD suggests 10 areas that deserve special attention in older houses:

—Termite infestation and wood rot. This calls for expert knowledge and is of extreme importance, especially in areas of the country that have a history of infestation.

—Sagging structure.

—Inadequate wiring. Be sure wiring is in good condition, with adequate amperage and enough electrical outlets.

—Heating plant. Check the general condition of the system and get an estimate of how old it is and how long it can be expected to function.

—Inadequate insulation.

—Faulty plumbing. Try to check with the plumber who last serviced the house. Check for water pressure. If possible, choose a house connected to a public sewer system.

—Hot water heater. Check condition and capacity of system.

—Roof and gutters.

—Wet basements. A basement that's dry in summer can be a different story in spring. Check for signs of water around foundation walls.

—Examine condition of outside paint or siding and the paint and paper inside. Be sure windows and doors operate and are in repair. Inspect floor and wall tile and fixtures. Determine if the house plan is, or can be made, suitable for your way of living. Get all available instructions and warranties for equipment, names of service people.

With a new home, HUD notes, reliability of the builder is an important consideration. A reputable builder is in business for life. Arrange to talk with people who are living in houses constructed by the builder you are considering.

More Pointers
And consider these points:

—Be sure the contract is complete. There should be written agreement on all details of the transaction. Leave nothing to chance, or oral agreement.

—If new street paving, water sewer lines are involved, know whether you or the builder will pay. Check on charges for water and trash collection.

—Obtain a firm date for completion in the contract.

—Don't be afraid to check construction progress regularly.

—The day before you take title, make a thorough inspection trip.

And remember, there is no such thing as the perfect house, new or old. Just be sure you know where the house you are buying falls short—and that the shortcomings are things you can live with. Then enjoy your home.

AREA METHODIST WSCS MEETINGS

The Asbury United Methodist W.S.C.S. held its regular meeting June 15th at the home of Mrs. Paul Barrows, Jacksonville. The assistant hostess was Mrs. Wesley Hilligoss.

The meeting was called to order by President Mrs. Paul Barrows and was opened with group singing.

Fourteen members and one guest, Mrs. Danny Clemons, answered roll by naming a favorite rose. Mrs. Geneva Crawley read the secretary's report, and Mrs. Arvel Becker gave the treasurer's report. The members voted to help with the expense of purchasing new curtains for the church basement.

Correspondence from Mrs. Melvin Sims was given by Mrs. Barrows. After a brief discussion it was voted to serve the Pisgah Fertilizer dinner July 22.

Devotions were given by Mrs. Howard Becker. Mrs. Arvel Becker gave the program on The History of the American Flag. Mrs. Emma Hembrough read a beautiful poem called Peace. The members joined in giving the pledge to the flag.

The next meeting will be in September, with Miss Dorothy Taylor and Miss Elizabeth Hembrough as hostesses.

The meeting closed by all members repeating the benediction. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistant.

The Women's Society of Christian service met June 13 in the Virginia United Methodist church parlor, following the regular executive board meeting.

Devotions and prayer by the president Mrs. Huffman opened the meeting. Mrs. Wilhite read a poem, God's Touch, in observance of the worship center. Mary Ohrn gave the missionary report. A certificate presented to the Society by Mary Sudorink, concerning a life time membership in the organization and signed by Peter Cartwright, Methodist circuit er, was placed in the church parlor.

Letters from the district president and the Cunningham Home in Urbana were read. Mrs. Herzberger presented the program, Missions.

Medic engineers
LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — A new brand of engineer, one trained for a career in hospitals or medical instrumentation industries, will be graduating from Purdue University in a couple of years. The course is in response to the need for engineers in the health care delivery field.

The new profession combines engineering skills with medical advances to provide more effective, safer, and less costly care for patients.

With a new home, HUD notes, reliability of the builder is an important consideration. A reputable builder is in business for life. Arrange to talk with people who are living in houses constructed by the builder you are considering.

More Pointers
And consider these points:

—Be sure the contract is complete. There should be written agreement on all details of the transaction. Leave nothing to chance, or oral agreement.

—If new street paving, water sewer lines are involved, know whether you or the builder will pay. Check on charges for water and trash collection.

—Obtain a firm date for completion in the contract.

—Don't be afraid to check construction progress regularly.

—The day before you take title, make a thorough inspection trip.

And remember, there is no such thing as the perfect house, new or old. Just be sure you know where the house you are buying falls short—and that the shortcomings are things you can live with. Then enjoy your home.

The Woodson-Walton-Walker 4-H club met at the Woodson Christian church June 16 with Mary Irlam presiding. Pledges were led by Darlene Linsey and Lori Farmer.

A letter was read to the club from the assistant home advisor concerning demonstrations and achievement day. The club decided to work from 8 to 11 at the federation stand at the fair. Kathy Black and Mary Irlam reported on their trip to State 4-H week at Champaign.

Mary Irlam gave a demonstration. Food demonstrations were given by Sara Suttles and Crystal Strubbe. Each member brought a food dish to make a potluck dinner.

Talks were given by Kathy Black, Angela Lear, Sherry Barton, Julie Thompson, Lisa Laukess and Cathy Irlam. Angela Lear read a poem and the club held its regular meeting Wednesday, June 14 8 p.m. at the Morgan County Extension office. President Dean Baxter called the meeting to order with pledges being led by Susan Baxter and Mike Sullivan.

Roll was taken and the treasurer's report given. Members were reminded to fill out their record books and finished them after the fair. County achievement will be June 27.

The club voted to work at the Federation Stand during the Fair, July 2 from 11 to 2 p.m.

The Berea Agriculture 4-H club held its June meeting at the Berea church. The meeting was called to order by president, Bruce Kinney, and Bob Johnson. Demonstrations were given by Susan Martin, Bruce Kinney, Diane and Dwayne Farmer.

Refreshments were served by Bob Johnson. The next meeting will be July 19.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Most American motorists, although they spent more than $20 billion last year for new cars, don't really know what it costs to own and operate one. The Federal Highway Administration, in a recent publication, estimates it will cost the owner of a standard size 1972 automobile $13,552.95 to operate and maintain it over the 10 years of its anticipated life, or 13.55 cents per mile.

LECHY BROWNSTONE, Associated Press Food Editor, says flank steak may be studied over scored side of steak, rolled up, beginning at short end. Place steak on grill about 5 inches above hot coals. Baste with barbecue sauce. Periodically turn and baste steak. Cooking to desired doneness. For a rare steak, about 35 to 40 minutes will be needed.

Steak roll may be baked in a preheated 400-degree oven for about 50 minutes.

HOUSE OF MODELS in Tallinn, capital of Estonia in the U.S.S.R., presents these wedding dresses.

The J. Edgar Hoover Memorial Medal

The J. Edgar Hoover Memorial Medal is a portrait of the man who has been called the "G-Man" in coming, but through the courtesy of the Freedom Foundation, the designer and sculptor, we are able to show photographs of the complete artist's models. The medal will be issued by Presidential Art Medals, Inc., of Vandalia, Ohio 45377.

Menconi captured the strong, determined features of the No. 1 "G-Man" on the obverse, surrounded by 48 stars denoting his 48 years of public service as director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The signature has been reproduced from a letter from Hoover to Menconi dated Feb. 26, 1970, during

The reverse depicts various elements from the FBI seal, dominated by an unblinded statue of Justice holding a set of balanced scales in her right hand and a sprig of laurel in her left. The main device is flanked on the right by the words Department of Justice and on the left by Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Supporting the figure of Justice is a scroll bearing the motto of the bureau: Fidelity-Bravery-Integrity. Thirteen stars punctuate the various components.

The medal will be issued in a limited edition in antique bronze, 5,000 serially numbered pure silver, and 500 one-tenth 14-karat gold-filled with a 24-karat gold finish. Delivery is not expected until October but for details and availability of Hoover medals in other than plus advance reservations, R. James Harper, president of Presidential Art Medals, suggests interested readers write or call for details and availability of Hoover medals in other than plus advance reservations, R.

numismatic Association Certification Service, an English-speaking foreigner who is very discreet in selecting unsuspecting dealers to whom he will offer a supply of 1799 U.S. gold eagles is due to arrive in the United States.

Only one of these well-made fakes will be allocated to each city to prevent immediate detection. Only 37,449 pieces of the genuine $10 gold piece were minted, creating an approximate market value in excess of $1,000 each. Most of the originals are accounted for in collections, making a single coin at bargain prices—tempting to almost any coin dealer or collector with a knowledge of its value.

These fakes are mass-produced in Milan, Italy.

Direct all coins to be verified to: Charles Hoskins, director, the American Numismatic Association Certification Service, Box 87, Benjamin Franklin Station, Washington, D.C. Enclose check or money order for the proper fee: $5 for a coin valued to $150; $7.50 for a coin valued to $151 to $300; $10 for a coin valued from $301 to $500 and 5 per cent of the value for coins valued over $500.

Registration certificates will be returned to the sender if the coin submitted is genuine. The check or money order should include fee for return postage and insurance. For your protection, coins mailed to the Certification Service should be insured.

A dedicated high school photography teacher's two latest prizewinning students are proof positive of his theory that the photo bug syndrome keeps them so busy and interested that they and registered.

Orders for Great Britain Millennium Proof sets should be sent to Royal Mint of Great Britain, P.O. Box 700, Benjamin Franklin Station, Washington, D.C. 20044. Price per set is $8, plus 75 cents each for postage. Limit is three sets per order.

Angles

youngsters have no time for the counter-culture mania which he thinks menaces so many young people today.

The teacher is Warren King of Reseda High School in Los Angeles. His students are Ron Contarsy, 18, who won the $1,000 scholarship grant in the 1972 Scholastic-Kodak Photography Awards contest, and Gil Smith, 17, who won the second top prize of a $500 scholarship. This is the first time in the 39-year history of the Scholastic photo competitions that the two major awards have gone to students in the same high school.

With careers as professional photographers as their goal, Contarsy will use his scholarship at Brooks Institute of Photography at Santa Barbara and Smith at the Rochester Institute of Technology.

"Reseda High was the first in the Los Angeles School District with a photography unit when it was built 17 years ago," King recalls. "When I came in as a full-time photography teacher, the Scholastic photography awards contest seemed to have been designed for our benefit. It provided a practical motivation and a useful target for our efforts. We became expert photo marksmen, too, for we have won about 200 awards through the years but our double bulls-eye this year tops everything."

Young Contarsy and King were given a trip to New York to attend the debut of the beautifully-mounted exhibit of 270 award-winning photographs and to receive the scholarship. It was also a self-appointed working assignment for them as they are recording their experiences in a slide-show story. The slide story will then become another tool which King uses to maintain the excitement and interest in photography which he arouses in his students.

To stimulate beginners' interest, King has accumulated a collection of famous pictures of Pulitzer Prize winners and prints by well-known photographers. These are shown as classroom exhibits while he tells the human-interest stories which are behind the photos.

When the photo bug really bites, the students are likely to join the school's active camera club and their weekends are devoted to picture-taking field trips. In addition, professional photographers are invited to the school to show their work and discuss the problems and rewards of the profession.

King also has worked out a system whereby advanced techniques in color and in black and white are demonstrated and taught to the more serious pupils by student teachers who are college students majoring in photography. All in all, the high school students are kept extremely busy with photo assignments but the work is made exciting, stimulating and visually rewarding.

"That's why they have no time to get involved with the pot or drug scene," King explained. "If they did, they couldn't do the required work and would have to drop out. We get them hooked on photography instead."

There is no summer letup among King's more determined students. In early July, Ron Contarsy and Gil Smith will be among 100 students under King and seven instructors on a six-week Foreign Study League photo tour of Europe. Arrangements have been made to have their transparency films get one-day processing service in the big cities on their itinerary. They will get a literal "see-as-you-go" evaluation of their pictures.

It's a program which King tested last summer in a pilot project which proved popular and successful. While the primary focus is aimed at the adventures encountered in foreign activities and scenery, some diversionary educational tangents will be made by visits to successful local photo studios, photo labs and plants.

The summer's experiences should prove valuable for students seeking new material for next year's Scholastic photography contest, material to work on when the fall term commences.

All students in grades 7 through 12 in public, private or parochial schools in the United States and Canada are eligible to submit entries for the 1973 competition. Pictures in both color and black and white will vie for a total of 220 national honor awards totaling $6,000 in prizes. However, all entries must be submitted only through schools. The two Kodak college scholarship awards are offered to high school seniors who exhibit outstanding ability as shown in a 12-photograph portfolio demonstrating photographic versatility.

Contest rules, available in October, should be requested from: Scholastic Photography Awards, 50 W. 44 St., New York, N.Y. 10036.

Some Amazing Response

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER
NEW YORK (UPI)—"Amazing Grace" is an old hymn that has been sung in American churches for more than a hundred years but now it has found new prominence as a hit record.

The hymn, described as a "slow air," was recorded by the Royal Scots Dragoon Guards' pipes and drums and military band to commemorate the merger of the Royal Scots
Greys regiment with the 3rd Carabiniers—two units with proud combat records.

Several other pieces of music were put on tape to celebrate the occasion and then the concert was forgotten until a British disc jockey put "Amazing Grace" on his program and because he thought it was something different.

He began receiving requests to play "Amazing Grace" and the response was so great that the hymn was issued as a commercial recording.
At the time of this writing,
"Amazing Grace" has been at the top of the British bestseller list and is beginning to move up on the American charts.

The Royal Scots Dragoon Guards' concert is now available on an LP, "Amazing Grace" (RCA Victor LSP-4744).
"Amazing Grace" is played on a bagpipe by Warrant Officer J. Pride, who is joined by the drums and band.

On first listening, "Amazing Grace" commands attention because of Pride's facile work with the bagpipe. And the music grows with each succesive playing.

Although "Amazing Grace" is the popular number, there are several other noteworthy selections.
Among them are a medley of marches and the Russian imperial anthem, which the Royal Scots Greys played for the Russian czars.

Selected Singles—"Butterfly"

(London 45-179), "Sunny Morning" by Sonny Curtis (A&M Records 1359).

Tape Deck—Two recently issued tapes which should arouse considerable interest involve collaboration between star artists in their own field.
One is "Brass no Ivory" by Henry Mancini, whose talent as a pianist has been overshadowed by his brilliance as a composer and band leader, and Doc Severinsen, one of the better trumpet players (RCA Victor P8S-1862). Among the selections are "Brian's Song," "Poor Butterfly," "Soldier in the Rain" and "Willow Weep for Me." The other brings together an old-time country wizard, Chet Atkins, and the

The Weeders' Guide

By EARL ARONSON

AP Newsfeatures

Roses are blooming.

You can prolong the life of your cut roses by several days if you follow a few suggestions from Jackson & Perkins, one of the most knowledgeable names in the business.

1. Roses will keep best if cut in late afternoon or early morning, when their sugar content is the highest.

2. Cut your roses on an angle with a sharp knife or pruning shears, just when the outside petals first start to unfold.

3. Place them immediately into warm water, deep enough to cover two-thirds of the stem, preferably with a floral preservative added.

4. Condition them by leaving in a cool dark place without drafts for three or four hours or overnight. The refrigerator is a good place.

5. Before arranging, remove leaves that will be below water level in the vase.

6. Use a floral preservative in

from drafts and add fresh water daily for the thirsty roses.

To revive blooms when they start to wilt, cut them again, on an angle, and place them in hot water.

If you should get bare-root rose bushes, then find you can't plant them promptly, here is what to do:

Soak the plants for 24 hours in clean, cool water, even if you can plant them sooner.

If the weather isn't good for planting, remove the bushes from their plastic bag, sprinkle the roots liberally with water, re-cover them and return them to the box. Repeat this every three or four days until time for planting, then soak the roses overnight.

Soaking helps the roses start faster and grow more rapidly.

Hybrid tea roses bear large single flowers on long stems.

Floribundas are free-flowering, producing blooms in clusters.

If you haven't done it already, prune your rose bushes to improve their appearance, removing dead wood.

Use sharp tools, such as a fine-toothed saw for thicker canes, or pruning shears.

Don't leave bare stubs. Make all cuts on a cane to the point on the crown from which the pruned member originated, or to a strong outward-facing bud.

Remove all winter-damaged canes and those affected by insects and diseases the previous year. If there are no live buds, remove the entire branch or cane. Then remove canes rubbings or crossing one another, those growing toward the center of the bush and those smaller than the diameter of a pencil.

Shape the plant by cutting strong canes to a uniform height.

England Making War On Empty Office Racket

LONDON (AP)—For eight years Harry Hyams made millions by doing nothing.

He pioneered the idea that landlords can earn greater profits by keeping offices empty. It is perfectly legal. Hyams built the biggest empire of empty office blocks in Britain.

The joke, which politicians called a national scandal, ended Monday night.

The British government declared war on empty office blocks in a new policy aimed primarily at Hyams and his property company, Oldham Estates Ltd.

Environment Minister Peter

Walker told a cheering House of Commons he would order

new taxes or consider compulsory rentals unless these offices are let in the next few months.

Hyams' company refused comment. But it was forced to rethink its policy on its four

London office buildings including the most famous one,

Centre Point, a 33-floor prestige block empty since it was finished eight years ago.

Centre stands at one end of Oxford Street, London's department store row, occupied only by security guards and their dogs.

When it was built, Centre

Point office space could have commanded rentals of $11.20 a square foot for leases of 15 years. Today the same space would rent for $18.40 dollars.

Hyams always has insisted that he was waiting to rent the whole building to a single tenant.

Because of the acute shortage of office space in central London, the potential rental income of Centre Point kept skyrocketing as long as the building stayed empty. So did the shares of the property company in which Hyams is the main stockholder. That is how he made his money.

Furthermore, because the building was empty, Hyams paid far lower property taxes on it than he would have paid if it was rented.

Hyams' four office blocks in London total about 650,000 square feet, enough space for 4,500 workers. Together the buildings are worth more than $184 million.

Hyams still has several options.

Ask To Talk To Nixon

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — Ten Midwest governors have asked for a meeting with President Nixon to discuss the possible "severe economic impact" his decision to lift meat import restrictions might have on American agriculture.

The resolution was adopted unanimously Wednesday at a closing session of the Midwest Governors Conference.

Chicago, East Ill. RR Charged With Pollution

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department accused the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad and its district engineer Wednesday of oil pollution of the Little Calumet River.

The eight-count criminal information, filed in U.S. District Court in Chicago, charged oil spillage into the river from the railroad's diesel fueling station at Dolton, a southern suburb of Chicago.

The oil spill was caused by a blown gasket on a locomotive.

The incident was the basis for the first five counts of the information which charged the railroad with violating the Refuse Act of 1899, which prohibits dumping refuse into navigable waters.

The railroad's district engineer, R. A. Hartselle, was named in four of the five counts and also was named sole defendant in the remaining three counts which charge failure to notify federal authorities of an oil spill.

Maximum penalty upon conviction of violating the Refuse Act is a $2,500 fine—plus one year in jail if an individual is charged—and for violation of the Water Quality Act of 1960, fine—plus one year in jail if the defendant is an individual.

Wallace Stands For First Time Since Shooting

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Gov. George C. Wallace, aided by braces and parallel bars, stood up Tuesday for the first time since he was shot in an assassination attempt May 15, an aide said.

Press Secretary Billy Joe Camp said Wallace, confined to Holy Cross Hospital at Silver Spring, Md., stood up at the start of a new phase of physical therapy designed to counter paralysis of Wallace's legs.

"The governor was fitted for braces on his legs today and he actually stood up with the help of parallel bars," Camp said.

Taylor Hardin, state finance director and a close advisor to Wallace, said Wallace told him to prepare the governor's mansion for his return to Montgomery "possibly within four or five days."

In Birmingham, Dr. George H. Traugh, a specialist in rehabilitation medicine, left for Montgomery today to check the governor's mansion for barriers that could prevent the free movement of a person in a wheelchair.

Traugh, regarded as an expert on architectural barriers for the handicapped, is an assistant professor of rehabilitation medicine at the University of Alabama medical center here.

Traugh said he expected to complete the inspection today and would make recommendations on any building modifications that might be needed.

Some Democratic governors had favored more critical comments on the Nixon decision, but the resolution was tempered to win bipartisan support.

The resolution says imported meat is "generally of an inferior quality to that produced in this country" and declares that the long-range outlook is or "stabilizing meat prices through the normal free market process."

The governors asked that a delegation from the Midwest meet with the President "to convey to him their grave concern" and to offer their help in assuring fair prices for U.S. meat producers.

In other action, Republican Gov. Robert Ray of Iowa was elected conference chairman and Democrat Gov. J. James Exon of Nebraska was named vice chairman.

The governors accepted an invitation from Gov. Richard Kneip of South Dakota to hold the 1973 conference in that state, probably at Rapid City.

The governors also had a brief but spirited discussion of state roles in welfare, with Gov. Warren Hearnes of Missouri roundly criticizing welfare rights organizations.

Hearnes said no solution to the welfare problem is likely until the federal government takes a "hard-nose" attitude on requiring welfare recipients to take available jobs.

Hitchhiker Gives Thumbs Down To Fine

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ann M. Upshure went to jail when she refused to post $10 bond for hitchhiking on Interstate 71 near here Tuesday.

A driver had stopped and told the New York City traveler it was illegal to hitchhike on an interstate highway, but Mrs. Upshure didn't give up.

Then Ohio Highway Patrolman R. P. Burkhardt warned her, but she held her ground—hoping for a ride.

She got one—directly to the Columbus City Women's Correctional Institute.

Burkhardt arrested Mrs. Upshure, writing on the ticket that she became "very belligerent" when taken into custody.

Mrs. Upshure had $8 in her purse but refused to pay the $10 hitchhiking fine. Bond was set at $10 and she went off to jail.

Mrs. Upshure, listing her occupation as "demonstrator," came to trial Wednesday before Franklin County Municipal Court Judge Joseph M. Clifford.

She told Clifford she was returning home from St. Louis after taking part in "a labor-for-peace rally."

The judge fined her $10, then suspended the fine.

WORRALL RITES HELD WEDNESDAY

Funeral services for Robert E. Worrall were held at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Cody and Son Memorial Home with the Rev. William J. Boston officiating.

Organist was Mrs. G. O. Webster, who played in the Garden and How Great Thou Art.

pallbearers were Robert L. Brune, Sr., Carl W. Lawless, Jack Maddox, Andrew Patterson, Sam Wild and Alonzo Worrall.

MINOR ACCIDENT ON NORTH FAYETTE

There were no injuries in an accident at the intersection of North Fayette and Jordan at 7:27 a.m. Wednesday.

Cars driven by Benjamin T. Large, 20, of Route 2, Murrayville, and Irene Madin, 65, of Ashland collided at the intersection.

Mrs. Madin was ticketed for running a yield right of way sign.

The car owned by Mr. Large had to be towed from the scene.

BUY SAVINGS BONDS

Hearnes said welfare rights groups and many congressmen have accepted the notion that jobs such as domestic servants are "degrading" and thus can recipients.

"If you're unemployed, there is no job that is degrading—but the welfare rights organizations don't believe that," Hearnes said.

Gov. William Guy of North Dakota suggested that the problem won't be solved "by giving someone an apron"—but said later he merely meant there are not enough jobs for domestic servants.

"Don't make fun of a domestic," Hearnes said. "It's just as honorable to be a domestic and take $2 an hour as it is to have any other job and $2 an hour... that's part of the problem—we make fun of certain occupations."

Voting for the resolution on meat imports were Govs. Edgar Whitcomb of Indiana, Richard Ogilvie of Illinois, Wendell Anderson of Minnesota, David Hall of Oklahoma, Robert Docking of Kansas, Kneip, Exon, Ray, Hearnes and Guy.

The Morgan County Fair in conjunction with the Jacksonville Speedway will present an action packed Fender Car Race program Sunday, July 2.

Top Midwest fender car drivers will be competing for a total $1,000 in cash prizes to be awarded. The main winner will receive $175.

A special added attraction among the day's events will be the Ladies Powder Puff Derby.

Gate opens Sunday at 12:30 p.m. with racing to begin at 1:30. Admission prices are two dollars for adults, one dollar for children, ages 8 to 13, and children under 8 years, free.

Following this exciting day of races, on Tuesday, July 4th, the fastest late models in the Midwest will compete for $1,500 in prize money during a 50-lap feature event plus regular heat events. Trophies will also be awarded during both race days.

Gate opens Tuesday at 2 p.m. with racing to begin at 3. Adult tickets are $2.50, children, 8 to 13, $1.25 and children under 8 years, free.

EDT Thursday. It will be his first such appearance before live cameras and microphones since June 1, 1971.

As for possible further troop cutbacks, Ziegler said, "We will have another announcement on this subject before Sept. 1."

The two-month cut of 10,000 men, he said, was based on an assessment that they could be withdrawn without threatening the remaining American forces and "without jeopardy to the Vietnamization program."

Ziegler was questioned about uniformed Americans stationed elsewhere in Southeast Asia and was asked how many of the 10,000 involved in Wednesday's announcement would be simply transferred to Thailand or elsewhere in the area.

He suggested such transfers would involve "a minuscule number."

Pentagon sources said some 45,000 Americans now are in Thailand, compared with about 32,000 before the buildup prompted by Hanoi's offensive.

These sources placed the current manpower of the 7th Fleet off Vietnam at 42,000—up from 13,000 last January.

Medicare Facts

Copies of a new and expanded edition of the Medicare leaflet, "How to Claim Medical Insurance Benefits," are available upon request from the Springfield social security office, H. J. Vasconcelles, social security district manager, said Wednesday.

Vasconcelles said the new edition includes information on how Medicare determines the "reasonable charges" for physician's services. For elderly people signed up for the doctor bill insurance part of Medicare, he noted, the law provides payment for 80 percent of the "reasonable charges," over and above an annual deductible of $50.

Under Medicare law and regulations, a charge is considered "reasonable": (1) if it is no higher than the doctor has been customarily charging all his patients for the particular service; and (2) if it is also no higher than the charges made for that service in three out of every four cases by other doctors in that locality.

If a doctor's bill for services to a Medicare beneficiary is higher than his customary charge, or higher than the charges made by most other doctors in that locality, the Medicare payment is not based on the full amount of the bill, Vasconcelles said, but on the amount determined to be the reasonable charge. For the Medicare beneficiary who has already paid the first $50 of his covered medical expenses for the year—the deductible amount—the Medicare payment will amount to 80 percent of the reasonable charge.

The leaflet, Vasconcelles said, emphasizes that although a doctor's bill may at times be more than the Medicare "reasonable charge" this does not necessarily mean that his charge for the particular service is not reasonable. Each year, a full review is made of the amounts physicians have been charging for medical services during the preceding calendar year and "reasonable charges" under Medicare are updated to take any changes into account.

Single copies of the new edition of the leaflet "How to Claim Medical Insurance Benefits," can be obtained without charge by writing or calling the Springfield social security office. The address is 528 South Fifth street, Springfield, Illinois 62701, telephone, 525-4000.

Pallbearers were Matt Wagner, Bob Duncan, Joe Standley, Charles and Ed Standley, Jim Duncan and Richard Kennedy.

Burial was made in Calvary cemetery.

GRANDDAUGHTER OF BLUFFS WOMAN DIES IN EAST

BLUFFS — Word has been received here of the death of the 21-year-old granddaughter of Mrs. Helen Marsh of Bluffs, early Tuesday at Fort Lee, New Jersey. Pamela B. Marsh is also survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Byron (Marguerite Ershman) Marsh, and twin sisters, Diane and Denise, all of Fort Lee, N.J. Mr. Marsh is a native of Bluffs.

Miss Marsh attended the University of Illinois and the University of Missouri before her illness.

Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at the First Presbyterian church in LaGrange, Ill. with burial to be in LaGrange.

Visitation will be at the church from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Thursday.

Friends wishing to do so are asked to consider memorials to the Cancer Society.

REPUBLICANS HONOR FORMER CHAPIN COMMITTEEMAN

Members of the Morgan County Republican Central Committee met Tuesday evening to formulate plans for the fall election and a variety of summer events.

Passed by unanimous vote of the committee was a resolution honoring the late Earl E. Smith of Chapin who served as an elected Republican precinct committeeman throughout his adult life.

The resolution expressed the committee's deep and profound sense of loss and was ordered sent to Mr. Smith's family.

Republican Chairman Harris Rowe said the county committee did not take any action concerning the endorsement or opposition to a proposed change in city government.

Rowe said Wednesday he was not sure that the committee, as such, would take any action either for or against the proposal.

Marines Killed 29 Years Ago Buried In Arlington Cemetery

WASHINGTON (AP) — On a hillside at Arlington National Cemetery, World War II's sorrowful memories are being reopened for the families of five Marines who gathered to bury their sons and brothers killed nearly 30 years ago at Guadalcanal.

Wednesday's funeral rites answered the plea of Mollie Johnston of Littleton, N.C., mother of one of the Marines, to bring her son's body home "if it takes a hundred years to find him."

About 40 surviving relatives were expected to attend the funeral, but not Mrs. Johnston. She died a few years ago.

The remains of the five Marines lay in lost, unmarked graves on the Pacific island battlefield until they were discovered in 1970.

The five, among nine Marines killed by Japanese small-arms fire on Oct. 9, 1942, were identified as Pfc. David W. Johns, of Johnstown, Pa.; Pfc. Eugene Johnston, Littleton, N.C.; Cpl. John F. Suggs, Richlands, N.C.; Pvt. Paul E. Gagnon, Augusta, Maine, and Pfc. Godfrey E. Hunter Jr., Winston-Salem, N.C.

They were members of Company E, 2nd Battalion, 7th Marines, 1st Marine Division, on a six-day sweep from the Matanikau River to Point Cruz on Guadalcanal's northern coast.

Because of the heavy fighting, the Marine Corps said, eight of the Marines were buried where they fell.

A Marine spokesman said artillery barrages and the rapid jungle growth hid the grave sites and only three of the eight were later found by the graves-registration service. They were brought home for burial.

The families of the remaining five were notified of their deaths but told the bodies could not be found. In a letter to the commandant of the Marine Corps in 1946, Mrs. Johnston pleaded: "I want him brought back if it takes a hundred years to find him."

In 1970, Mrs. Y. Timothy Kwaimani, wife of a forestry official on Guadalcanal, found the skeletal remains of an American serviceman and the identification tag with the name: "G.E. Hunter, 131427, U.S.M.C."

A subsequent search, prompted by a letter from Mrs. Kwaimani to the 1st Marine Division Association in the United States, turned up additional remains.

Paramedics May Get $2.6 Million For New Service

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The federal government apparently has earmarked $2.6 million dollars toward creating a model emergency medical services system in Illinois.

The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare said Wednesday that it has awarded the funds to the state Public Health Department. But the head of the Illinois agency which would administer the money said "there are a few days of negotiations and a contract to sign before anything becomes final."

Dr. David Boyd, chief of the state Division of Emergency Medical Services, said that Illinois has been a strong competitor for the funds because of the success it has had in establishing trauma centers at 40 hospitals throughout the state.

Any new money, Dr. Boyd said, would be used to expand the emergency program to include, primarily, such areas as coronary care, high-risk pediatric care, drug control and psychiatric care.

He mentioned as an example of the program the possibility of training firemen and ambulance drivers to provide better care for persons stricken by heart attacks. Some 60 per cent of the persons killed by heart attacks die in places other than hospitals, he said.

Rock Festival Plans Uncertain

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — The sponsor of a scheduled July 4 rock festival declined Wednesday to reveal his plans following the issuance of a temporary restraining order barring the event.

Herschel Tucker, 26, of Peoria who had planned the festival to take place on a farm 10 miles southwest of Peoria, said the order had not been served by late Wednesday.

His attorney, Dennis Weber, indicated he is considering filing a motion for rehearing of the case, but that he was skeptical of the chances for a rehearing, or for a change in the decision if the rehearing should be granted.

The order was granted Tuesday by Circuit Court Judge Albert Pucci, at the request of Peoria County officials. He noted in his decision that Tucker had not obtained permits for a mass gathering either from the state or the county.

Tucker said groups lined up for the festival include Quick Silver, Cactus, the Big Brothers, J.J. Cale and the New Riders of the Purple Sage.

STRIKES TIE UP 3-COUNTY AREA

CHICAGO (AP) — A carpenters strike, which coupled with a walkout by members of a cement masons union local, has tied up major construction in a three-county area, will go to federal arbitration.

Representatives of the Chicago District Council of Carpenters and their employers were summoned Tuesday to Washington to present their cases to the Construction Industry Stabilization Committee.

The walkout has halted about $1.5 million in major construction in Cook, Lake and Du Page counties where nearly 75,000 workers have been idled.

A union spokesman said the stabilization committee set its hearing for Thursday and that it has the power to permit or deny proposed wage and benefit contract settlements.

He said the committee could help on contract money matters but would have little to say about work rules—among the disputed issues.

Carpenters currently earn $7.65 an hour. They are asking an additional 65 cents an hour retroactive to June 1, another 65 cents beginning Dec. 1 plus health and welfare benefit increases amounting to 15 cents an hour.

They have been offered wage and benefit increases totaling 91 cents.

The masons have been offered wage-benefit increases totaling 5.5 per cent. They are now paid $8.90 and hour.

Paramedic Bill Gets Approval In Statehouse

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The General Assembly approved and sent to the governor Wednesday legislation which will allow specially trained medical personnel at the scene of an emergency to administer a wide variety of medical care.

The bill, which was approved by the House 108-21, was called "highly premature" and dangerous by some opponents, who claimed that further study was needed on the matter.

Under the plan, hospitals would be given the green light to begin pilot projects in which paramedic personnel are trained and allowed to administer a variety of medical treatments while in contact with a licensed doctor by radio.

Called "Mobile Intensive Care Personnel," they would among other things be able to administer intravenous saline or glucose solutions, perform gastric suction by intubation and administer a broad range of drugs.

Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, said that presently emergency personnel dispatched to an accident are greatly limited in what they can do and cannot engaged in any medical treatment.

The paramedics would be required to undergo training through the Illinois Department of Public Health and each hospital participating in such a pilot program must submit a progress report every 12 to 15 months to the General Assembly.

Rep. Bruce Douglas, D-Chicago, who is an oral surgeon, said the legislation was very premature and needed much more study.

"I'm in favor of paramedical professionals, but this is a hit and run thing. People with very limited training are being delegated the responsibility of diagnosing and detecting treatment," Douglas said.

Schlickman said under the programs each of the paramedics would be adequately trained and in radio contact with a licensed physician.

ern Christian Leadership Conference, received a standing ovation when he entered the meeting with his party to ask for the use of Flamingo Park, near the Convention Hall, to set up Resurrection City II.

"I come today with a mandate from the poor," Abernathy said. "We feel that we must make a witness at this Democratic Convention. We have chosen to build Resurrection City II and through a nonviolent process to exercise our right to challenge the Democrats to be the party of the people."

Most of the councilmen said they were impressed with Abernathy's plea and were in sympathy for his cause, but Hall said the council was hamstrung by its vote last week to deny campsites to all protesters within the Miami Beach city limits.

Abernathy said he planned to bring in 500 persons who would provide their own tents and toilet facilities and do their cooking in area churches.

City Manager Clifford O'Key was instructed to find out promptly if there was some way the council could get out of its no-campsite bind and accommodate Abernathy's group.

By ROBERT M. COHEN
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A young man about the neighborhood returned from school the other day and announced to his amazed parents that the teacher had ordered all his seventh-grade class to use deodorant daily.

Noise pollution is ruining our hearing. Instant food is ruining our taste. Now they are going to deprive us of the smell of human beings.

No wonder there is a movement called sensitivity training. Remember, these specific 12-year-olds attend an air-conditioned school, shower after gym classes, probably shower each morning, and change daily into crisp, clean clothing.

There was a considerable difference not so many years ago. We single out the Seymour, Tex., Grade School and Seymour High School of that time only because they were closest to our heart.

This was in the days before automatic water heaters, even before bathtubs in most homes. Schools had a subject called "Health." It stressed that everyone should take a bath twice a week.

This was easier demanded than done. Each pupil got a star if he swore he did bathe twice weekly. The school at one point reached a crisis. The star quarterback, runner, punter and linebacker was on the verge of flunking "Health." So he took real effort to pass "Health."

Frankly, the school's corridors were a little gamey. But you knew those around you were human beings, truly, not robots.

If you believe the star should have showered after each practice, you just don't understand. There were no school showers. Taking a bath was a real chore. You put a couple of large kettles on the stove, dragged in a washtub, and tried to adjust the heat of the water in the tub until it was bearable.

One teacher, noting that a young fellow didn't even have a fraction of a star on his "Health" card, wrote a letter to the youngster's mother demanding that he bathe.

Came back a reply: "Melvin can't bathe. He's already sewed into his long underwear for the winter."

Now, it's deodorants for schoolboys. The world is coming apart.

Hal Boyle is on vacation.

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Many Diseases Underlie Problem
Sodium Causes Fluid Retention

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.
Dear Dr. Lamb—I am 60 years old and have swelling in my feet and ankles, also my face, eyelids, hands and other parts. My normal weight is 104 one day and the next day it is 112 or more. I feel huge. I have been under a doctor's care, but am frightened because my eyelids are still swollen, and as soon as I stop taking water pills, I begin to swell. Would you please discuss edema and what a person can eat to feel comfortable. I am afraid to drink any water or eat anything at this time. I would certainly appreciate your advice as I must work five days a week in order to live and pay my bills.

Dear Reader—There are numerous causes for accumulation of fluid, called edema. Sometimes it is caused by hormones. Fluid may accumulate before the monthly period, and many women have difficulties with this problem in the menopausal and post-menopausal periods when they are taking hormones.

Heart disease can also cause edema because of poor circulation. It can cause fluid to accumulate in the lungs, causing an asthmatic type reaction, sometimes called cardiac asthma, or it can cause fluid in the feet, legs, liver and elsewhere, so can kidney disease.

The important thing to do is to correct the underlying problem, if possible, whether it is hormones, heart, liver, kidney or otherwise.

Obviously, since there are so many causes for edema, its treatment involves a long list of different medicines. Only your doctor, who is totally familiar with your case and understands the causes for your edema, can know which one of these is proper in your case. The diet is important in most of these problems and I would especially want you to know that drinking ordinary water in most instances will not influence your retention of fluid. Rarely the sodium content of city water is too high. If so you buy bottled water, make sure it is distilled water, not mineral water. Your body remains fluid because it retains the sodium that occurs in salt. Distilled water does not contain sodium.

Fruits and fruit juices are allowed and usually contain very little sodium. Although some vegetables contain some sodium, if they are cooked without salt and no salt is added, they can usually be eaten. The same thing applies to rice and most cereals. Of course, you need to avoid products made with salt, like some bakery products. Sodium occurs in most animal products, including meat, fish, fowl and dairy products. These have to be eaten in limited quantities to restrict the salt intake in the diet. However, if one overdoes this, he will not be getting adequate protein. For most people, I would suggest more non-animal products, that is, fruits, vegetables and cereals, and avoiding using salt in cooking. This will go a long way toward controlling salt intake. If a more severe restriction is needed, you should go over it very carefully with your doctor, or a dietitian he recommends.

Do you have questions about the menopause? If so, you'll want to read Dr. Lamb's booklet in which he answers your questions on the subject. Send 50 cents to Dr. Lamb, c/o Jacksonville Journal Courier, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, N.Y., N.Y. 10019. Ask for "Menopause" booklet.

Greene County area boys, Steve Brant, Doug Israel, Barry Locher, David Schutz and Bill Sykes have returned from a four-day canoe trip on the Current River located in Missouri. The boys also spent one day at Six Flags Over Mid-America.

On June 20th the American War Dads Auxiliary held its monthly meeting at the Amvets Post. The following members were elected as delegates to the state convention to be held at the St. Nicholas Hotel in Springfield, July 15-16: Mrs. Opal Bends, Mrs. Louise Fanning, Mrs. Lois Anderson and Mrs. Edith Kirchhoefer; alternates, Mrs. Ethel Chambers, Mrs. Donna Newby, Mrs. Dora Ledbetter and Mrs. Helen Patterson.

Reports of the various committees were received. Hospital Chairman Opal Bends reported the chapter had given a party for veterans at the State hospital. Past presidents had also hosted a party June 15. Bingo was played at both parties with prizes of cigarettes and candy bars given. These events were hosted in cooperation with the Volunteer Services of the hospital.

At the close of the business meeting, the War Dads were invited for a memorial service. The charter was draped in honor of deceased Auxiliary member Mrs. Della McGinnis and War Dads Wallace Hembrough and William Cochran. Auxiliary President Mrs. Mary Looker and War Dad President Robert Anderson, assisted by Opal Bends, chaplain pro tem, were in charge of the services. Mrs. Robert Anderson read a poem in tribute to the deceased members.

SPRINGFIELD FAMILY MOVES TO ASHLAND

ASHLAND — Mr. and Mrs. William Cunningham of Springfield who purchased the Harold Elliott home moved to their new home Saturday. The Cunninghams have two sons, six-year-old Mark, and Brett, who is four. Mr. Cunningham is a salesman for Litton Medical Products out of St. Louis, Missouri.

Mr. and Mrs. Boering of Albuquerque, New Mexico, are here visiting at the home of Mrs. Boering's sister, Mrs. Jas. Shanks for a few days, having been called here by the death of her mother, Mrs. Florence Cherry last week.

Mrs. Ted Cowser and daughter, Diane, have left for a month's visit in France with relatives. Mrs. Cowser is a native of France.

Brian Benson of Neosho, Mo., visited his great aunt, Mrs. Bernice Hayes, overnight recently. The following day they went sightseeing in Springfield.

Mechanics for Fems
NEW YORK (UPI) — Feminist Forums in New York recently offered women one-day home mechanics workshops. The basic course covered carpentry, electricity, plumbing and power tools.

The workshops were taught by Florence Adams who, worried about the high cost of renting space for herself and her two children, bought and rebuilt a brownstone. Ms. Adams stressed the practical approach to problem-solving and how to avoid the high cost of outside help.

F. BRUCE KRYSIAK
President and Chief Executive Officer

July 4th, Independence Day, is a great American Holiday. It is a day when we celebrate the birth of our country, a day when we remember the sacrifices of our forefathers who fought for our freedom. It is a day when we are reminded of the values that have made our country great. The spirit of 1776 — flows in the veins of every loyal and patriotic American. It is the spirit that keeps the light of freedom burning not only for Americans but for all other people throughout the world. On the 4th of July, let us fly our American flag proudly, and when we say our pledge of allegiance, or sing our National Anthem, let it be loud and clear —

It's Great To Be An American!

Just A College

EDITOR'S NOTE—Claremont isn't just a college—it's six colleges. The cluster concept seems to be working quite well for the California schools, academically and financially. But, socially...

CLAREMONT, Calif. (AP)—Although shrouded in smog much of the year, the unique Claremont College cluster hasn't lost its ability to attract big money and academically brilliant young men and women.

This mini educational conglomerate, situated at the base of the towering San Gabriel Mountains, about 35 miles east of Los Angeles, is actively considering expansion at a time most private schools are cutting back.

Expensive and highly selective academically, the five undergraduate colleges recruit only from the upper echelon of high school graduates. A high percentage of their graduates continue on to graduate or professional schools.

In explaining its financial success, Kenneth Beyer, vice chancellor of the University Center, said: "The Claremont colleges represent high quality education. There is no question about it, people respond to quality and not needs."

To which Barnaby C. Keeney, president of Claremont Graduate School, added: "You can't raise money on sentiment."

Their appraisal is borne out by a seven-year fund drive that was intended to raise $86 million but at the end of the drive this April had nearly $105 million in the pot.

Like many American campuses, Claremont had its student uprisings in 1969 and 1970. Two bombs were exploded on the campus and one seriously injured a secretary during a rash of demonstrations over ethnic studies. Anti-ROTC demonstrations triggered some window smashing and once the protesters bricked up the entrance to the ROTC building.

Today, however, the 264 acres of contiguous campuses is quiet and almost seems empty of students. Because dorms and classrooms are close together, few students are seen wandering around the beautiful campus with its wide variety of trees from all parts of the world and immaculately groomed gardens. Although there are 5,000 students and 500 faculty, there is no parking problem on any of the campuses ranging in size from 19 acres for Harvey Mudd to 120 for Pomona.

As far as radical demonstrators go, said David Feinberg, editor of the student Claremont Collegian, "they're all gone. Many have gone to Berkeley, some to Israel. There is now great interest to work within to bring about change."

Although each of the colleges traces its origin back to Pomona College, grandmother of the group, each school is legally independent, has its own president, faculty, board of trustees, distinctive campus and educational emphasis. Any one of the schools can withdraw from the group with a year's notice.

Besides Pomona, a broad liberal arts college founded in 1887 and largest of the group with 1,300 students, there are Claremont graduate school (1925), Scripps College for Women (1926), Claremont Men's College (1947), Harvey Mudd College (1955) and Pitzer College (1963).

As a group, the six colleges operate at a cost of $3.5 million a central library system with nearly 800,000 volumes, health and counseling services, a bookstore, 2,600-seat auditorium, computer center, two ethnic centers and many other common facilities and programs.

Except for the graduate school, which draws on all the undergraduate schools for part of its faculty, individual schools do not share instructors. Instead, they share students. Cross registration permits a student to take courses in any of the colleges without extra charge and represents about 20 per cent of undergraduate instruction.

The cluster concept was the idea of James A. Blaisdell, president of Pomona after World War I when pressure mounted to expand Pomona's planned limited enrollment.

He proposed that "instead of one great, undifferentiated university, we might have a group of institutions divided into small colleges around a library and other utilities which they would use in common. In this way I should hope to preserve the inestimable personal values of the small college while securing the facilities of a great university."

"It's fine academically," said Tom Hesketh, a junior political science major at Claremont Men's College, "but socially, Pitzer and Scripps (both adjoining his home campus) might as well be 10 miles away. It's a dehumanizing experience. I'd like to start a new school. One recently underway is proposed for law, medical and architecture schools.

"The creation of new colleges at Claremont is relatively easy," said chancellor Howard R. Bowen, whose main function is to plan ahead for the cluster. "Vacant land is available and central facilities are in place and ready to serve a new institution."

Bowen is no crepe hanger about the future of private schools but concedes that competition from tax-supported state schools has its impact. He said on an average the cost of attending Claremont runs in excess of $4,200 a year as compared with $2,200 for resident students at a state school.

"We do have comfortable reserves, surpluses and endowments," he said. Collectively, the group has assets of $185 million.

Stating that the "real bite comes for schools with no reserves," Bowen added: "If you are rich you can economize and if poor, you can't afford."

For Claremont, Bowen said, the future thrust is to "develop it as a center of scholarship and learning, developing in strength not size and attracting scholars of national reputation."

Throwaway Game—Both Of You Win

While looking through my collection of old sayings, the nearest I could find describing my husband and myself was "Birds of a feather flock together."

I couldn't find anything about pack rats or people who save everything they've ever owned.

The reason I happened to be looking through my collection of old sayings was that it happened to be in a box he wanted to throw away the last time we were playing Getting Organized.

It was right on top of the pair of pink gloves my mother wore to a dance in Indianapolis the night Herbert Hoover was elected president.

Getting Organized is a game we play constantly. We change the rules occasionally. This time we'd agreed to match each other in throwing away useless items.

"You don't need this!" I said, tossing a mossy-looking raincoat into the throwaway corner.

"I wore that when I left home to go to California!" he cried.

"Well, what about this?" I asked, gingerly picking up a crumbling straw hat.

"I wore that the first time I went deep-sea fishing," he mourned.

"This?" I asked.

"I carried that rock back when I climbed Pike's Peak!"

"You couldn't let this go, I suppose."

"A napkin with Ginny Simms' autograph?" he asked incredulously. "You can't mean it!"

I held up a matchbook cover. "From my first date."

I pointed to a box of sea shells. "My family always went to Wildwood," he explained.

The old watch box? "It was a high school graduation present."

The bent key? "Fit the trunk lid of my first car."

The medicine bottle filled with dirt? "That's hallowed ground! Got it when Purdue went to Rose Bowl!"

I wrapped the bottle carefully in my mother's pink gloves, tucked it inside the evening bag I carried to my senior prom.

No matter how we play the game, we always win.

Finds family okay

CHICAGO (UPI) —The future of the family? Here's the way Dr. Martin Marty answers that question: "Despite much apocalyptic talk about the 'death of the family' and despite devastating assault on its serenity, the family or its equivalent will no doubt remain on the scene."

The associate dean and professor of modern church history at the University of Chicago made that point at an American Medical Association conference attended by authorities concerned about children and young adults.

Spruce and fir trees grow best on loams, but pines prefer deep sandy soils.

Currently, the cluster is phasing out a five-year program to admit 40 disadvantaged, high potential students a year "who couldn't get in even if they wanted," said vice chancellor Beyer. He said the program, financed by a $750,000 Rockefeller Foundation grant and $500,000 of school money, had been a fantastic success but is being phased out because "we proved a point but just couldn't do everything."

Financially, the group is solvent but individual colleges do have some budgetary problems. The Graduate School, Pomona and Scripps all had operating deficits but none was viewed with extreme alarm.

"One of the main problems," Scripps.

Student aid has nearly tripled between 1965 and 1971 and in the case of Scripps, where 40 per cent of the students receive some kind of assistance, the limit of our resources."

Except for Pomona, the existing undergraduate colleges are limited to a maximum of 800 students each but only Pitzer and the men's college are near that figure. Harvey Mudd has a self-imposed ceiling of 400 and president Joseph B. Platt said there are no plans to raise it.

Pomona, Pitzer and the graduate school have coed dorms. The 33 women enrolled at Harvey Mudd use dorm facilities at Scripps.

CMC student body president Neil Locke describes it as "a sterile atmosphere. The emphasis is on pickup. There's no natural way of meeting."

Elinor Shanklin, a sophomore at Scripps, said, "I'd rather have coed dorms."

Student editor Feinberg said there are a lot of small functions, "like coffee hours and get-togethers but no massive inner action between students from the various campuses."

Actually, Claremont is in the center of activity. It's less than an hour to Los Angeles, about an hour to the beaches and ski resorts and an hour-and-a-half to desert resorts.

In the summer, Feinberg said, "no one stays. Too much smog and heat."

Polins: 1972 Watershed Year For Rate Of Crime

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — A federal official told midwestern governors Tuesday that 1972 may be a "watershed year" in which the nation's crime rate begins to turn downward.

Dean Polins, assistant administrator of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA), said the rate of increase has declined for the past four years.

Polins said the increase in crimes dropped from 11 per cent in 1970 to 6 per cent in 1971, according to FBI statistics.

"We're reducing the increase. That sounds like statistical juggling, but I would venture a guess that 1972 may be the watershed year when we actually begin reducing crime," he said.

Polins praised the governors for their efforts in reducing crime. Robert Crew, director of the Minnesota Crime Commission, said the LEAA program has been floundering to some extent.

But Illinois Gov. Richard Ogilvie had high praise, declaring that many innovative state programs would have been impossible without the federal funds.

Gov. David Hall of Oklahoma described a get-tough program of criminal justice in his state. Hall said his first executive order was to require that all prisoners be given some form of education into even the lower grades of school. Hall said the program aimed at easing the inmates back into society with usable skills.

Hall said a work release center in Oklahoma City has a recidivism (repeater) rate of only 7 per cent, half the national rate for such programs and only a fraction of the 60 per cent recidivism rate for all prisoners.

The governors also heard reports from Nebraska and Illinois on new approaches to communications among governmental units.

Ogilvie and Dr. David R. Boyd, Illinois chief of emergency medical services, told how setting up trauma care centers had improved early medical treatment of accident victims.

Regional, area and local trauma centers have been established throughout the state. Patients are transported to the centers in helicopters and in ambulances equipped for in-transit treatment. The "back-

Newsman Recounts Scientists' First Contact With Tasadays

By JOHN NANCE
TASADAY FOREST, Philippines (AP) — The jet helicopter hovered in the cool air of the 4,000-foot-high mountains and four men leaped out, sprawling flat and clinging to a wooden platform tied into a treetop.

The men peered over the edge. Seventy-five feet below was a ridgeline no wider than a car which plunged immediately into thick jungle as it slanted down another 300 feet.

Air blasts from the rotor blades rocked their small land-discovered last year at the edge of this vast and rugged southern Philippines rain forest.

The Tasaday—who live in caves, use stone tools, wear orchid leaves and know no enemies—said no outsider had ever seen their homes in a valley of the undulating forest. They said their ancestors had lived there since their knowledge of time began.

In an early March meeting at the forest's edge, the Tasaday invited visitors to their place, but one young man warned: "You may not be able to make it; the way is very difficult."

The helicopter whirled into the forest the misty morning of March 23rd.

As the aircraft emerged between two peaks, a dot of yellow-brown appeared in the dark jungle below. The chopper dipped and the dot grew, revealing the platform made of branches and saplings.

The pilot circled once, nosed his helicopter up to the 12-by-14-foot pad and the doors were opened.

Manuel Elizalde Jr., president of Panamin, a government-supported foundation for assisting Philippine minorities, and leader of the expedition, leaped first, opening the latest and most exciting phase of discovery since he first contacted the band of 25 people last June.

Charles A. Lindbergh, the American pilot and conservationist who is a director of Panamin, joined the expedition two days later.

Minutes after the helicopter delivered the first of its three loads, a young Tasaday man named Balayam arrived, hugged Elizalde and led the expedition down the steep ridge.

Balayam led the party on an hour's hike to a slope where the jungle thinned. Through the leaves the mouth of a cave was dimly visible.

Heads poked from ledges and two higher caves. The Tasadays were shouting greetings and bounding down a dusty path to cluster around the visitors. The Tasaday nuzzled and embraced Elizalde, who they say is the man their ancestors had foretold would one day come to them.

"He would just love us and help us—we were never told how," said Mahayag, a robust Tasaday man.

The handsome men, women and children wore only earrings and leaves and their tan skin was streaked with soot from their fires.

Whether the caves have been the Tasadays' homes for a few generations or thousands of years is not known.

Scientists last year said the Tasaday's language and technology suggested they had been isolated more than 1,000 years.

The Tasaday grew increasingly friendly during the expedition's visit and the shyest women and children eventually smiled and spoke through interpreters.

The people displayed the sparse possessions in their main cave, which has a 10-foot-high mouth. It is roughly 30 feet deep and 25 feet wide.

It contained a few mats of bark, deer horns for digging edible roots, odd bits of food, firewood, two favorite stone tools and a collection of items—knives, woven baskets, a tin can that once held crackers and a batteryless flashlight—origin unknown.

No drawings marked the walls.

A surprise was the small area over which the Tasaday range in their food quest, the main activity of the band. The jungle provides abundant food—river life, plants, insects, flowers, roots and the pith of trees—near the caves.

Dafal, a hunter who gave the Tasaday their first metal knives, said meat constitutes a minimal part of the Tasaday diet because their animal traps

They are creatures of the 20th century. Elizabeth, 35, Panamin decided on the March expedition because farmers were already encroaching on the forest and logging companies had already acquired claims on it.

Catskill Mountains Attract Many Types

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor

LIBERTY, N.Y. (UPI) — For years, comedians got laughs with jokes about the "Borscht Belt" and the "Jewish Alps."

The references were to the Catskill Mountains in New York's Sullivan County only a few hours driving time from most East Coast cities with big Jewish communities.

The Catskills were popular with Jewish vacationists, not only because they were close but mainly because hotels observed the orthodox Jewish dietary laws. Non-Jewish holidaygoers went elsewhere, where they would not have to eat unfamiliar kosher foods.

But times have changed. You really didn't have to be Jewish to enjoy Jewish food and in recent years there has been a steady increase in non-Jews vacationing in the Catskills and filling up on borscht and blintzes, kasha and kreplach and other dishes their mothers never made.

Diversified Guests

"We're getting more guests from all ethnic groups—not only from New York but from Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Detroit, Montreal and other cities across the United States and Canada," said Mrs. Elaine Grossinger Etess. "And so are other hotels in the area."

The attractive blonde Mrs. Etess is the daughter of the celebrated Jennie Grossinger, and with her brother Paul helps run the family hotel and country club which sprawls across 1,200 acres and offers a wide variety of accommodations and activities.

Mrs. Etess told visiting travel writers that during the Easter-Passover holidays more than 40 per cent of Grossinger's guests were non-Jewish. She said many of the conventions held in the hotel are by non-Jewish organizations and added "no one has complained about having to eat kosher food, yet."

As do most of the resort hotels in this area, Grossinger's operates on the American Plan—that is, three meals daily.

The big luxury hotels have a reputation for feeding their guests that is almost legendary, with menus offering a wide variety of choices from appetizers to desserts.

Dedicated calory-counters can fight the battle of the bulge by golfing, tennis, swimming, boating, fishing, hunting, riding, hiking and other land and water activities. Gymnasiums, health clubs and saunas also are available. Many of the larger hotels remain open year-round and offer all winter sports, too.

Hotels Have Theaters

There are about a score of top luxury resorts in the Liberty-Monticello area alone, including Grossinger's, the Concord at Kiamasha Lake, Litcher's near Hurleyville, Nevele near Ellenville, and Brown's near Loch Sheldrake. All have private golf courses—the Concord has two championship 18-hole and one 9-hole layouts—which also are open to non-guests. There also are 18-hole and 9-hole public courses at or near most of the bigger resort centers.

There is action after dark, too. Most of the major resort hotels have theaters and or night clubs and book popular singers, dancers, comedians and other headline performers as well as Broadway shows and top-name bands.

There also are summer theaters and art shows and harness racing with pari-mutuels at the Monticello Raceway. For sightseers there are historical attractions, covered bridges, and miles of scenic mountains, fields and streams.

Sullivan County is easily accessible by road from New York and other major cities. The major resort area known as the "Golden Quadrangle" is about a two-hour drive from midtown New York via the Route 17 Quickway. Bus and limousine services are available and air taxis can be arranged between the Sullivan County International Airport and the New York City airports.

About 200 lakes and streams in Utah are open to year-round fishing.

Verdi Continued

To Fill The House

By WILBUR G. LANDREY

NEW YORK (UPI)—In the days when Italy was divided under foreign rule, the music of Giuseppe Verdi (1813-1901) sounded a stirring call to unification and freedom.

Verdi's great operas not only carried a patriotic message, they filled the opera houses of Italy for their wonderful music. They still do so, while contemporary composers are ignored.

In his third opera, Nabucco, written in 1841-42, the "Va, pensiero" chorus of Jews lamenting their fate aroused storms of applause from Italians who believed their country oppressed by the Austrians.

In his fourth opera "I Lombardi alla prima crociata," (The Lombards at the First Crusade), the chorus of Lombards singing before Jerusalem "O Signore, dal tetto natio... O Lord Thou didst call us from our native hearths..." evoked the same patriotic enthusiasm when it was first performed at La Scala in 1843 and ever after.

The first version of the opera on stereo records has just been released by Philips (6703 032), directed by Lamberto Gardelli at the head of an excellent cast, the Royal Philharmonic orchestra and the Ambrosian singers.

Opera in Italy had been going more than 300 years before Verdi. Claudio Monteverdi (1567-1643) was its first great composer, and the greatest of his immediate successors was Francesco Cavalli (1602-1676). The composer in those days did not leave full scores but wrote out only the voice and bass parts, leaving the particulars to be filled in for the occasion. For many years this inhibited their revival.

Raymond Leppard revived Cavalli's "La Calisto" at the Glyndebourne Festival in Britain in 1970, however, and Argo has issued a two-disc recording based on that production which seems admirable in every way (ZNF 11-12).

It is a story of gods, goddesses and mortals in which Calisto, a mortal, is seduced by Jove, the king of gods and ends up in the heavens as Urbs Minor, the Little Bear. In fact, the sentiments expressed show considerably more sophistication than those of "I Lombardi."

Folk Medicine Still Practiced

By JIMMY F. KEMP

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI)—If someone offers you a little tansu root for what ails you, don't just laugh it off.

Herbs—or folk medicine—are used all over the world to treat ailments from diabetes to indigestion. And though herbinal medicine appears to be disappearing, it still forms a distinct medical subculture that varies from ethnic group to ethnic group.

Using plants and parts of plants to treat disease has attracted the attention of Dr. Clarissa Kimber, a Texas A&M University researcher who is studying and classifying herbs found along the U.S.-Mexican border on the basis of their medicinal use.

"A great many women use plant remedies before going to a doctor," Dr. Kimber says. "Some women have told me that if they have gone to a doctor without quick relief, they turn to herbal medicine."

Folk Remedy Expert
So far, Dr. Kimber has classified more than 400 specific herb medicines made up of their whole plants or stems, flowers, fruit, bark or roots.

She has concentrated her efforts on plants that grow along the border in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California. Technically, Dr. Kimber is a plant geographer, and one of her main interests is how folk remedies are transmitted from one area to another.

Distant Origins
"Like many cultural items, folk medicines can be shown to have origins quite far away from their scene of present use," Dr. Kimber says. "To see the castor bean growing so commonly in Texas, you would never know it is a native African plant."

The oil of the castor bean, one of the most common folk remedies, is used by many American families as a laxative and lubricant.

Some of the more common plants utilized in making herb remedies along the U.S.-Mexico border include native ones such as purple sage, cud weed, estafiate and sunflower seeds.

The most common plants—the castor bean, pirl peppers, peppermint, rosemary, and basil—were imported to the New World during the Spanish conquest of Mexico.

Along the border, the ailing seeking a herb remedy visit curanderos, or folk curers, who tell them what to take for their particular complaint.

Curandero Cures

"Most curanderos practice clandestinely," Dr. Kimber says, because their prescriptions are tantamount to practicing medicine without a license.

Many other persons visit herb shops, which are legal, and buy the different plants available without inquiring into their specific uses. They find out later that eating papaya fruit is one treatment for indigestion.

Additional remedies in the Mexican-American pharmacopoeia include a tea of zendo leaves for kidneys and respiratory organs, a tea of laurel leaves to help start the flow during menstruation, and a brew from twigs and bark of retama for diabetes.

ATTRACTING STARES, a battery-powered wheelchair that can go up and down steps is demonstrated at the 29th hospital exhibition in Essen, West Germany.

Pittsburgh's Young People

By STEPHEN MORROW
PITTSBURGH (UPI)—John "Spike" Pfahler doesn't look like the sort of man you expect to be helping run a medical facility.

His brown hair curls over his collar. He almost always wears faded blue jeans. He's a college dropout. His favorite place in the world is a bar in Amsterdam where the intoxicated come in hot pipes, not cold glasses. Before he started his present work, he was employed in the draft resistance movement.

Now Pfahler puts in a 60-hour week in the basement of the East End Christian Church as medical coordinator of the Pittsburgh Free Clinic. The four nights a week that medicine is practiced here, the main room looks like a large, low key party of college students and a few mod professors.

Under posters urging peace, about 40 persons in their late teens and early 20s, in long hair, dungarees, work shirts, head bands and shawls, sit on dilapidated couches in the waiting area talking animatedly in small groups.

In four immediately adjacent consulting rooms, two gynecologists and two general practitioners examine patients. Between each pair of consulting rooms is a "prep room" where the next patients strips, attended by a nurse.

Three young women in dungarees bustle about a well-equipped medical lab, at the same tasks they perform in starched whites as hospital technicians by day. Further removed are the small rooms where troubled young men and women see psychological counselors.

All Volunteer Time
All of these highly trained individuals are volunteers. Each clinic night, another half-dozen volunteers serve as patient greeters and organizers, to maintain the relaxed atmosphere of the waiting area.

The physicians range from older men with children the same age as the patients, to young interns. The counselors include Ph.D.'s in clinical psychology, full professors, psychiatric social workers and college guidance counselors. Asked why they work at the free clinic, they sound like volunteers anywhere—they like the work, they think it's important and they like these people.

Since the Free Clinic was opened in September, 1970, by a group of physicians concerned about untreated medical problems rampant among the city's youth, approximately 15,000 persons have come for free help or treatment.

The counselors include Ph.D.'s in clinical psychology, full professors, psychiatric social workers and college guidance counselors. Asked why they work at the free clinic, they sound like volunteers anywhere—they like the work, they think it's important and they like these people.

Since the Free Clinic was opened in September, 1970, by a group of physicians concerned about untreated medical problems rampant among the city's youth, approximately 15,000 persons have come for free help or treatment.

About half the patients suffer from sexual problems. Forty per cent sought testing or treatment for venereal disease. The rest had "general medical problems."

Pfahler was recruited for his job because he spent four years as a Navy operating room technician.

"The first free clinic was founded in the Haight-Ashbury section of San Francisco in 1967," he said. "There are now about 200 free clinics across the country. All of them began because of the same need—in existing institutions, health services are not given or are not humanely offered to people who look like hippies, to minorities, or to people on welfare."

The Free Clinic here draws many dropouts. Guitarist Les Soucie, who has sung for his supper on the streets of Chicago, New York, Detroit and Cleveland as "Les More-or-Less," said: "This town takes better care of its freaks than any other. The free clinic is fabulous."

The clinic also treats thousands of college students, away from home, unable to find private doctors, and put off by emergency rooms.

"Some of the kids come because it's free, some because it's at night, some because they feel nobody's making any money off them and some because they've had bad experiences elsewhere," says Dr. Louis Meyers, a prominent gynecologist who helped found the clinic.

No Moral Overtones
Adolescents with sexual problems come to the clinic to find "medical treatment without moral overtones," another medical man said.

"The young people don't want counseling that their behavior is improper," he said. "When you're suffering from an inherently painful or disturbing venereal disease and someone lays on you the sins of your behavior, it's really more than you can bear."

According to a pretty blonde nurse, this group includes "every week about 20 teen-age girls living with their parents (who) come into the clinic afraid they're pregnant. About half of them are."

To deal with the most common problems—V.D., pregnancy out of wedlock and birth control, the clinic organizes special teams. The pregnancy team presents the alternatives and usually at some point, when the girl wishes, her parents are brought into the discussion.

Patients Calmed
"The V.D. counselors try to calm the patients, who are usually quite upset by having a venereal disease," Pfahler said. "We try to persuade them to bring in their contacts and thus stem the tide. Drug problems we turn over to two excellent programs in the city."

Dr. Bernard Yadoff, a professor who heads the counseling service at the clinic, said: "With drugs, V.D., any type of destructive behavior, our approach is to ask: Do you see what you are doing to yourself? Don't you think you are worth more than that?"

The clinic spent $23,000 on its first 10,000 patients, up to the end of 1971. Most of the money went for drugs, supplies and salaries for the three paid employees.

"I made $4,719.80 last year," Pfahler said. "I don't have time to spend money."

Automation Reaches Stratford Festival

EDITOR'S NOTE — The Stratford Festival is celebrating two decades of existence with something new — the help of a computer. But the automation is allowing more creative freedom.

In the decades since, shifts of emphasis, new talents and assorted performing arts combinations have been tried. Shakespeare eventually was dropped from the title in an ecumenical thrust, and the enterprise became Canada's national pride.

By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Writer

STRATFORD, Ont. (AP) — How do you keep an improbable dream from settling down into smug reality?

Probably the most important factor always has been determination to keep the established from becoming complacent Establishment. Gascon took over as artistic director five years ago and Wylie arrived with his computer concept.

Well, at the Stratford Festival, this summer celebrating its lusty 20th season, the answer features an exotic collaboration of space-age know-how and old-fashioned creative itch.

This is the third season in which a carefully programmed apparatus down in Toronto helps work out the display which this year continues until Oct. 21.

"Why," asks general manager William Wylie like a man who already knows the answer, "shouldn't the theater use sophisticated business technique to benefit artistic effort?"

Its value in keeping the fiscal structure balanced is firmly proven. Last year, according to Wylie, costs turned out to be just 2 per cent less than estimates, revenue was 5 per cent more.

Quite simply, the system that has been developed here to a greater degree than in any other North American culture venture, recruits the electronic computer to figure out viable boxoffice combinations from a large assortment of classics, new plays and musical events suggested by artistic director Jean Gascon.

For the first time, this season opened with an advance ticket sale of $1 million, against a possible $2.5 million gross.

"That may sound like automation," says Wylie, "but actually it gives us greater freedom in arriving at a balance between the surefire attraction and more experimental work which we regard as a highly important aspect of our work."

The chief exhibits in the 2,200-seat theater are "As You Like It," "Lorenzaccio," "King Lear" and the yet to open "She Stoops to Conquer."

With a current budget of $3.25 million, 10 productions in three auditoriums, plus a batch of other events, the Stratford Festival has traveled far since its modest start in 1953.

Artistic boldness is a prime Gascon concern.

The whole project began as a mere glint in the eye of a local journalist, Tom Patterson. The town's name, a rivulet named Avon and an enthusiasm for Shakespeare were the lures that persuaded the community to collect $150,000 for a two-play display in a huge canvas tent.

"We have a responsibility to open new windows," he says. "We must subsidize ourselves in new things. It's expensive—but that's the price of success."

Sir Alec Guinness and Sir Tyrone Guthrie were intrigued by the small town enthusiasm, the one to star in "Richard II," the other to oversee the whole project. Critics cheered, audiences

New this season is the Third Stage, a squat riverside structure in which two chamber operas, a new Canadian drama and a children's show will be put on for 200 spectators per performance.

The 1,100-seat Avon Theater, the test center for many ventures in the past, is being used for more extended runs than previously of two pieces, "The Threepenny Opera" by Bertolt Brecht and Kurt Weill, and "La Guerre, Yes Sir!," a satirical romp translated into English from a prior hit run by Quebec's Le Theatre du Nouveau Monde.

Automobile Recalls Viewed With Alarm

By DAVID W. CHUTE
DETROIT (UPI)—One dictionary defines recall as "to summon back." That's what American automakers have been doing in increasing numbers since the National Highway Safety Act went into effect in September of 1966.

Since that time, a total of 23,667,999 U.S. cars have been recalled—almost one of every two built in the period.

In 1971, more than one million 1971 model cars were recalled to find and repair suspected defects—one of every eight 1971 cars produced. So far this year, the industry has recalled more than 650,000 of its 1972 models—two-thirds of them by Ford Motor Co.

In addition, General Motors recalled 6.7 million Chevrolet cars built between 1963 and 1969—the largest single recall campaign in history—to put restraints on engine mounts to prevent the engine from shifting if a mount broke.

Despite the best efforts of the best automotive brains, the record does not seem to improve. The figures, however, can be misleading since, in many cases, large numbers are recalled because a few may have a defective part.

The specific cars can't be pinpointed; a whole week's production may have to be recalled to find just a few cars.

Why Defects?
Chrysler has had 82 recall campaigns since 1966. But a spokesman says that in some campaigns, only 10 per cent of the cars recalled were suspected of having a defect, and only 1 per cent actually had the defect.

Why, in an industry that is 75 years old and has developed the most sophisticated techniques and machinery for building good cars, do such defects keep recurring?

There's a little bit of everything in an over-all answer—engineering, design, quality control, human error on the assembly line, defective parts from a supplier, and just plain goof-ups. And, since 1966, the industry has been required by law to publicize each of its recall campaigns, adding to the impression that they just don't build them the way they used to.

An example of engineering error is Ford's wholly redesigned and restyled Mercury Montego and Ford Torino for 1972. The entire production run of 404,000 cars was recalled in May because a design error led to excessive bearing wear and the possibility the rear wheels would fall off.

Chrysler recently recalled 42,000 of its 1971 and 1972 Crickets, its British minicar import, to replace the rack bar on its rack and pinion steering assembly. American desire for air conditioning and other attachments placed a heavier strain on the steering mechanism than was experienced on the Avenger, the Cricket counterpart in England.

Another design error caused Ford to recall nearly 232,000 Pintos because excess fumes were being retained in the air cleaner while the car was not moving, causing some fires when the car was started.

Varied Recall Reasons
Some problems were caused by human error on the assembly line. American Motors had to recall a small number of Gremlins and Hornets because a workman installed the wrong bolt on the disc brake caliper.

Some recalls were for trivial things. Ford recalled 700 air conditioned cars because they had decals indicating recommended tire pressure and other information not corresponding to the tires on the cars.

An example of just plain goof-up was Ford's recall of about 3,600 cars because the triangular vertical shaft of the bumper jack would not fit into the base plate. Chrysler had a similar recall—both caused by suppliers not matching the correct base plates with the vertical columns.

American automakers aren't alone in problems with defects. The three major imports—Volkswagen, Toyota and Datsun—have each had their share.

In the past two years, about 22 per cent of the 550,000

Foreign Recalls Differ

The foreign makers are not presented with the same problems on their cars sold outside the United States because European standards vary country by country and are nonexistent in many nations outside the United States.

Most European countries have no counterpart to the U.S. Department of Transportation and have no regulations regarding defects found in cars.

The auto companies accept responsibility for the errors in assembly of their cars and are required to fix the defect free of charge to the customer. Getting the customer to bring the car in to have the defect repaired is another thing altogether. Recalls are lengthy procedures as evidenced by two recall campaigns from February, 1969.

GM recalled 2.5 million cars in that month to replace a carburetor part and about 20 per cent—or 500,000—still have not been brought in. Of 2.4 million Chevrolets recalled at the same time to seal the underbody from exhaust leaks, 32 per cent still must be fixed. Many of these cars may not even exist anymore or may have changed ownership several times.

Workmen's Errors

GM announced its engine mount recall campaign for 6.7 million Chevrolets last Dec. 4, HANOI, NORTH VIETNAM—Picture received by radio from Hanoi with a caption which claims it shows an anti-tuberculosis dispensary in the Dong Da district of Hanoi after U.S. planes bombed it Sunday. U.S. warplanes flew to within two miles of Hanoi Tuesday and dropped guided bombs on the North Vietnamese capital's major airfield, then streaked to the major port city of Haiphong and blasted its main thermal power plant.

The first letters notifying customers to bring their cars in to have cable restraints installed did not go into the mail until Feb. 21 and by the end of May, just over one million had been brought in to dealers for the work.

Today's automobile is a highly complex and sophisticated vehicle. It contains more than 15,000 parts, all of which are assembled by people.

Cars come off assembly lines that produce 60 to 75 cars an hour. The Vega assembly line at GM's Lordstown, Ohio, plant turns out 102 cars an hour—a speed some of its workers claim is too fast to do a good job.

It could be a coincidence, but the smallest of the Big Four automakers has the best record on defect-free cars. American Motors has recalled 52,060 cars during the past two and one-half years out of a total production of 511,698. That's an average of close to one recall for every 10 cars built, against the industry average of one in eight over the past year.

Changing Cell Operation

"Aging is a result of a changing in the operation of the cells," Rothstein said. "Every function performed in the body depends on enzymes which are produced and which act as catalysts for every chemical reaction in the body....

"I believe that in the process of aging, something happens in the cells that causes an organism to produce ineffective enzymes."

The research is being conducted under a $1 million grant from the National Institute of Child Care and Human Development. It is one of the largest grants ever awarded a Buffalo professor, the university said.

Rothstein, who received his Ph.D. from the University of Illinois, has been studying the biochemistry of nematodes for 10 years and has published a number of technical reports.

"It may never be possible to stop the aging process altogether," he said, "but such research might one day enable scientists to at least contribute to a healthy life that is otherwise jeopardized by old age."

Observe Worm Aging

"What we are working with is an organism whose cells we can observe at both young and old stages and we are observing the same cells," he said.

Rothstein said the nematodes, whose life span is only 20 to 40 days, are grown in test tubes and isolated, then separated into "young" and "old" organisms.

"By having control over the nutrients, temperature and other necessary growth requirements," he said, "the effect of these considerations on the total life span can be observed."

He said biologists already know that, physiologically, wrinkled skin is caused by biology, said his study would involve the use of nematodes—very small worms which keep the same cells from birth to death. Instead of cell multiplication, he said the nematodes grow by enlarging their cells.

There have been numerous theories about the aging process down through the years," he explained. "Practically as quickly as one comes up with one theory, it is contradicted by another."

"But regardless of the why or how, we all age and there must be a reason for it," he said.

HANCOCK CENTER JANITOR CHARGED WITH ARSON

CHICAGO (AP) — A youth who worked as a janitor in the 100-story John Hancock Center has been indicted on three counts of arson in connection with a series of fires in the building.

A Cook County (Chicago) grand jury returned the indictment Tuesday, naming Joseph Budakovic, 18.

He was arrested Nov. 23 after a fourth fire within five days broke out in a storage room used by residents in the 1,100-foot building.

FRUIT PRICES MAY BE HIGHER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's supply of noncitrus fruit such as peaches, apricots and sweet cherries will be smaller this year and consumers can expect higher prices, the Agriculture Department says.

The department blamed a cold spring season.

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio (UPI) — A wrecked gasoline tanker truck carrying 8,600 gallons of gas exploded and engulfed two policemen in flames just as they arrived to investigate the accident Tuesday night.

Patrolmen Tom McGough and Leonard LaMatrice, both of Steubenville, were in "extremely critical condition" at Mercy Hospital in nearby Pittsburgh, with third-degree burns over 90 per cent of their bodies. The intense heat melted the badge one officer was wearing.

The explosion and fire destroyed the Standard Oil Co. truck when its brakes failed on a long, steep road in Steubenville, Ohio. The driver managed to leap out of the cab and was not hurt.

Also destroyed were the police cruiser and six city buses parked in a lot where the truck crashed. Two nearby houses were damaged as well in addition to a huge barn owned by the Steubenville Bus Co.

Police said the driver of the truck, Willie J. Culler, 28, of North Canton, Ohio, lost control on a road in the city's north end after the brakes failed. The truck swerved around a bend breaking the tanker open, sending gasoline gushing into the street and spraying houses.

Culler turned off the cab's ignition and ran to safety while an eyewitness notified police and firemen. Five minutes later, McGough and LaMatrice arrived at the scene.

Michigan Man Wins $500,000 In Sweepstakes

DUBLIN (AP) — Ronald Radikopf of Grand Haven, Mich., won the superprize of a half-million dollars Wednesday in the Irish Sweepstakes.

The huge drum from which the winning tickets were drawn contained 4,425,988 tickets sold all over the world for the benefit of Irish hospitals.

The sweepstakes is based on the Irish Derby to be run Saturday at Curragh, 30 miles outside Dublin.

All winning tickets except Radikopf's drew horses running in the Derby. Holders of tickets on the winner of the Derby will each receive $130,000. Second-prize winners will get $52,000. The third-placed horse will bring ticket holders $26,000.

Fifteen tickets are drawn on each of 51 horses originally entered for the Derby. But only 15 are scheduled as still running in the race over the 1 1/4-mile course.

Everyone drawing tickets for one of the 51 horses are sweepstake winners in some category.

QUINCY BOY KILLED IN CRASH, 5 INJURED

LAGRANGE, Mo. (AP) — A car carrying an Illinois family slammed into a bridge railing and overturned late Tuesday night leaving one dead and five injured.

The highway patrol said the accident may have been caused by a mechanical failure.

Killed was George D. Tomko, 13, of Quincy.

Injured and hospitalized at nearby Quincy were his father, George W. Tomko, 48, his mother, Violet, 39, a sister and two brothers ranging from 6 to 10 years of age. They were not believed seriously hurt.

The accident occurred on U.S. 61 about four miles south of LaGrange in extreme north-eastern Missouri.

Inner Struggle Of NEA Breaks Into Open

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — A long-simmering, bitter struggle over whether the National Education Association should affiliate with teacher groups in the AFL-CIO broke into the open Wednesday.

Several leaders at the NEA's 110th annual meeting said the fight over merging with the American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, could split the 1.2-million-member teacher organization down the middle.

It broke into the open before the 7,300 delegates when Dr. Sam Lambert, NEA executive secretary, attacked any affiliation with the AFL-CIO. He said the association's New York State affiliate, which recently merged with the New York City United Federation of Teachers "will see how democracy really works in a big union."

He predicted that Albert Shanker, president of the New York City teachers union, would have "one-man control of teachers of New York... in less than two years."

Shanker is a delegate to the NEA convention, as a result of the merger.

Lambert implied that the NEA should consider refusing to affiliate with the merged New York teachers, despite the potential loss of $3 million in annual revenue, saying the NEA faced a similar situation in the South over integration and there was just as much at stake. In Louisiana and Mississippi, the NEA threw out white units for refusing to merge with their black counterparts.

The NEA's board of directors has proposed that NEA refuse to take part in any future merger that carries with it an AFL-CIO membership. But the board included a grandfather clause that would recognize the New York merger and those in Los Angeles and New Orleans and Flint and Gibraltar, Mich.

Lambert, who was interrupted at least two dozen times by applause from the delegates, said his speech might cost him his job, but later told a press conference he had no intention of resigning if he didn't get his way.

Lambert's five-year contract expires in August 1974, and he has said in the past he does not plan to seek a renewal.

He said he is willing to talk merger with the AFT, but only if the AFT is willing to drop its affiliation with the AFL-CIO.

Forestry Or Liquidation, Which?

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
ORICK, Calif. (NEA) — It's easy to see why people are disturbed by the threatened decimation of the redwood, a species of tree unique to this rain-and-fog belt of the Pacific Coast, where the Sequoia sempervirens (their scientific name) rise to majestic heights of 350 feet and are 20 feet in diameter.

The open bed trucks roll heavily north and south on U.S. 101, three huge logs piled in a triangle nakedly exposed, to the horror of conservationists.

Lucille and Bill Vineyard can see them from their home in Trinidad, on the highway a few miles south of the Redwood National Forest, which was consecrated to the preservation of the original-growth redwoods.

Lucille, an outdoorsy, middle-aged woman in blue jeans who spryly walks miles along the ocean every day, has taken me to the Ladybird Grove in the park, dedicated a few years ago by Mrs. Johnson. In a serene stand of huge, pristine trees, sunlight filtering through the forest, she points to the west, where the ridge drops off, and says, "They wouldn't let the reporters over there. It was cordoned off."

So we walk over and look by seeing for the first time the across the valley to Skunk Cabbage Ridge, which has been denuded of trees, a debris-strewn scar on the hillside.

"It's heartbreaking in the 20 years I've been in Humboldt County," she says, "to see the redwoods go out to sea, literally. It's the ruining of a land that people have lost respect for in the last money-grubbing century."

Lucille is officially concerned because she's chairman of the northern group of the local chapter of the Sierra Club. She has been involved since 1964, when the public was alerted by seeing for the first time the across the valley to Skunk Cabbage Ridge, which has been denuded of trees, a debris-strewn scar on the hillside.

This is lumber country, among the finest in the world. The economy of the area is largely based on it. The redwood is a remarkable lumber product, fire-resistant and termite-resistant. In his million-dollar showcase in Los Angeles, basketball player Wilt Chamberlain used enough redwood lumber for 17 normal homes.

Three big lumber companies—Georgia-Pacific, Pacific Lumber, and Simpson—dominate the logging of redwoods in the area. A board foot is a theoretical board one inch thick and 12 inches square.

But the redwood, despite the alarm raised by environmentalists, is not disappearing like the American buffalo did. Geologically, it has been in California 40-million years. It is perhaps the fastest growing conifer (cone-bearing) species in the world and reproduces itself by sprouting from the stumps of cut or fallen trees.

The schism between the lumber interests and those concerned with the ecology of the area (spearheaded by the famed Sierra Club) is over the fate of the virgin, untouched redwood forests, with some trees as much as 2,000 years old.

"They can't stand to see a tree die naturally," says Lucille Vineyard. "They can't manage a dead tree."

Her husband, Bill, is a professor of botany at Humboldt State College and used to have class nature trips on Bald Hill Road along Holter Ridge, past the Ladybird Grove of redwoods. No more. On both sides of the road, the ridge has been stripped of the big redwoods, leaving only the rubble of logging, and the bare patches run right up to the edge of the national park.

One hundred years ago, claims Gordon Robinson, the forestry expert of the Sierra Club, there were 1.5 million acres of old growth redwoods and now only 150,000 acres remain, privately held, and they're being reduced at the rate of 10,000 acres a year.

"The redwood industry as we know it," he says, "will disappear in 10 years. The logging is the most destructive conducted anywhere in the world. Eighty per cent of the surface is destroyed, and the productive capacity of the land is heavily damaged. This isn't forestry but liquidation."

An environmentalist will be almost as sensitive about living in a redwood house as he is about wearing alligator shoes.

However, stimulated by the cries of conservation groups, 75,000 acres of virgin redwood have already been set aside in national, state and county parks, protected from the chain saws and tractors which level the forests.

The lumber interests, a little gun shy from the attack of the conservationists in the last decade, now proudly boast of their forestry practices and claim they have finally reached a state of sustained yield, meaning the growth rate on their 900,000 acres of privately forested land equals the cutting rate.

Conservationists like Robinson counter that second-growth redwoods are only a paltry imitation of the real thing, and that the "shoddy" results are only fit for pulp and crude lumber.

But the felling of the redwoods for commercial purposes continues inexorably. The huge trucks continue to roll along the highways from the forests to the mills, where the tepee burners belch the smoke of refuse while inside the large plants the most sophisticated saws imaginably dissect the raw logs and produce smooth planks.

It all starts with someone like Walt Lara.

"I'm just a dirty old black Indian," he says when I ask how I'll recognize him. He's a Yurok, native to this north coastal region. He's a chopper, who specializes in sawing down old redwoods.

It's a delicate job. The Redwood is a fragile tree. A "lay"—the place where the tree will fall—must be prepared or the timber will splinter.

"I hate to see people go out and butcher 'em," says Walt. He is 37 and has some gray in his temples. "I earned every damn one of these," he says.

He started out in the brush peeling bark off trees, and now he has his own house trailer and five kids and his own car. It's an Eldorado Cadillac. "I worked damn hard for it," he says. "It's something you get once in a lifetime."

He also has his own pickup truck to take him into the woods for Georgia-Pacific. It's all incentive work. He gets paid $3.55 per thousand board feet (a six-foot redwood which might contain 9,000 board feet and take an hour to fall).

"I only went to the eighth grade," says Walt. "Logging is the only thing I can do to make a halfway decent living. I can make $2,000 in a good month."

Last year he worked 10-and-a-half months and made $20,000. The equipment costs him three to four thousand a year.

He is tough. A gang pulled a gun on him in a Eureka bar. "I went in with my chain saw," he says, "and smoked 'em out."

He won't wear goggles or earplugs. "One time I had a fight and got a black eye," he says, "and couldn't see out of my left eye, so I tried to wear goggles and couldn't see anything. It's not that dangerous work to us. Couple of years ago I got hit in the back of the head by a limb and still got the bump.

But the people that get hurt are the people that don't listen."

Walt is not very sympathetic to the conservationists who bemoan the ruining of the forests. "What the hell business is it of theirs? We don't bug people who take coal out of the ground and leave holes down there."

But he has a word of criticism for the lumber people: "They're not replanting with the species of redwood they take out."

Loggers will also criticize their bosses for lack of erosion control. Most of the damage is done in winter logging, when the ground is wet.

"They can log all they need in the summer," says Bruce Luton, "and spend the rest of the year working on forestry and company roads." The Simpson lumber company, for whom Luton works, has more than 800 miles of private roads on its forest lands.

Luton has spent 30 years in the woods. He is a hook tender, comparable to a straw boss—"I see it to it that the logs are gathered up."

Luton, who is 50, has been in the redwood country since 1950, migrating from the lumber camps of his native state of Washington. He was a sergeant in the 10th Mountain Division in Italy during World War II. His face is seamed. He wears a knit cap and the draggy clothes of the woodsman. He likes what he does.

"I'm a logger," he says, "not like those silver pickers who work in the mill. I like the brush. That rattling, rumbling and sawdust flying in the mills, that's not for me."

"It's more dangerous for us to go down to the city and walk across the street than be here where the timber's falling."

Luton is conscious of the struggle between environmentalists and the lumber industry over the resources of the redwood region. He feels the schism is due to lack of communication and lack of compromise. "Lumbering," he concedes, "has to be more flexible. And there's a younger generation coming in that's aware of the ecology."

Luton works in a part of the redwood region where, because of the steep terrain and soil conditions, "clear cut" logging is practiced. A parcel of forest is stripped clear of all trees (as opposed to "selective cutting" in which the old trees are marked for logging). The result—a naked, scraggly hillside—is particularly offensive to nature lovers.

"I'm going to be honest, regardless of where the chips fall," says Luton. "We tear the hell out of things. At the same time we try to restore it."

When not in the woods felling timber, he works the winter in the forestry department "and couldn't see out of my planning trees, so he sees both

RIVER TRAFFIC STILL OF INTEREST TO 'WATCHERS'

BEARDSTOWN — A large towboat called The Texas passed Beardstown shortly before noon Thursday, negotiating the hazardous railroad bridge draw without mishap despite a high wind.

Elmer Logsdon's switch boat lay off the north shore of the river just below the bridge ready to help if the tow slipped toward the shore in the wind.

On the lead barge a crew of men were at work sandblasting the barge floor, readying it for painting.

Walter Defenbaugh, a retired river boat pilot, said the Texas steersman probably was being assisted by a master pilot as the boat slowly approached the curving channel into the bridge span.

Defenbaugh said in his experience it was better to approach the curving channel into the R.R. bridge span with the rear end of the towboat closer to the South shore of the river and take a straight run for it.

He opined The Texas steersman probably was making his first trip in this area and found the local bridge a bit of a problem.

The Coast Guard has declared the bridge a hazard to navigation and plans are being made to remedy the situation with a new bridge, which is to be under construction soon.

Heartbreaking Mystery

BALTIMORE, Md. (UPI)—Each year approximately one out of every 330 babies born in the United States is found dead in his crib before he is one year old while apparently in good health and from no evident cause.

This has been going on for a very long time, and not only in the United States. But now for the first time there is a coordinated, big scale effort to discover the mysterious why of it and hopefully with this knowledge, to stop it.

The American Academy of Pediatrics, made up of baby doctors, the National Foundation of Sudden Infant Death, composed of involved scientists, and the Guild for Infant Survival, whose members are bereaved parents, are pressuring Congress and the Nixon administration for $10 million in tax funds for scientific research.

Sudden Infant Death in medical jargon is SID. In all instances there is a similarity which approaches identicalness, suggesting a specific disease.

The baby may have the sniffles of a cold but otherwise there are no signs of illness. He is tucked into his crib for the night or for his nap. When the mother returns, he is dead.

Death By Suffocation Autopsy indicates death was by suffocation. But there is no indication of how suffocation was brought about. Most deaths occur between the ages of two and three months and all before one year.

SID is the leading killer of infants. Official estimates place the annual U.S. toll at between 10,000 and 12,500 but not all SID's are reported as such. A similar occurrence is reported in Great Britain, western Europe and all countries where medical science is advanced. All indications are that SID is universal among people and perhaps has been since the beginning of the species.

In countries weak in medical science and in some sections of the United States, the belief persists that unattended infants can so tangle their garments and bedclothes that the tangles strangle them. This notion has been thoroughly discredited; definitely it is not —allowing always for the exceptional case —the explanation of SID.

The cause is a specific disease, it is a disease in no conventional sense. Though mild respiratory infections are often present, the cause is more than infection. It is likely to be a chance coming together of several deleterious factors not one of which would be lethal in itself, in the opinion of involved scientists.

Nerve Spasm Theory Dr. Abraham Bergman, Seattle, president of the National Foundation for Sudden Infant Death, has studied 470 cases. His theory is that a nerve spasm suddenly closes the vocal cords. This shuts off the airway and the infant strangles. A baby with a cold is somehow more susceptible to spasm.

Other scientists theorize the throat while some suspect it affects heart muscles. Others postulate that a small percentage of infants are unable to breathe through their mouths, for unknown reasons, during a particular stage of development. If nasal passages become clogged by a cold, they suffocate.

Dr. Russell S. Fisher, Maryland's chief medical examiner, has been conducting autopsies on SID victims for 20 years. In his opinion infection is involved but in no simple way —"there is something lacking in the infant's ability to fight off or resist the process of infection." He suspects it is the chemistry which produces antibodies and immunity.

The $10 million sought from the federal government could vastly expand the present scattered research into SID, especially by financing, over a long term, concerted efforts by scientific teams.

It would be distributed by the federally supported National Institute of Child Health and Human Development which in the past eight years has spent only $700,000 on SID research. Scientists do not accuse the institute of any lack of interest —its difficulty has been a lack of opportunity to spend more money fruitfully.

Need Joint Effort "We need the team approach," Fisher said. "We could spend a million dollars a year wisely by hiring 8 to 15 top-level immunologists, biochemists, pathologists, pediatricians and virologists, plus a staff. They would have to be assured of full support for three to five years and could come up with some answers in a few years."

The bereaved parents group, the Guild for Infant Survival, was formed eight years ago by Saul and Sylvia Goldberg, of Baltimore, a year after they lost a two-month-old daughter to SID. The Guild now has chapters scattered across the United States and one in Wales.

One of its services is to assure newly bereaved parents that they are in no way at fault and their babies were lost to a definite though unknown disease. The old and now discarded — strangled-in-bedclothes theory indirectly accused the mother of carelessness.

Even in the absence of spoken accusations, mothers commonly have deeply held guilt feelings which are not lightened by the common reaction of husbands that somehow a lapse in mothering was involved.

"It is usually the father who suffers most," Goldberg said. "He harbors his thoughts. Many women have a tough time with their husbands after a child is lost to SID."

MRS. BARRETT HAS 79TH BIRTHDAY AT CHANDLERVILLE

CHANDLERVILLE — A buffet dinner including the traditional cake and ice cream was held in honor of Mrs. Lenora Barrett on her 79th birthday at her home on Monday evening, June 19th.

Those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Eilers, Angela and Carol; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Barrett, Randall and John; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Taylor Jason and Ann; Chuck and Shelia Barrett; Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Barrett; Yvonne Edge, Tonya Taylor, Mrs. Viviana Barrett, Mrs. Lucy Schaad, and Mrs. Gladys Herrmann all of Chandlerville; Mrs. Pauline Clark of Petersburg; Mrs. Larry Barrett, Gregg, Tim and Matt of Havana.

Mrs. Barrett received many lovely and useful gifts.

The June meeting of the Mur-rayville Homemakers Extension unit was held with Mrs. Lyndel Hanback, 11 members present. Roll call was answered with a low calorie recipe.

The lesson Perspectives on Overweight was presented by Margaret Heaton. A lively discussion followed.

Mrs. Robert Mutch gave the selected subject, Empty Calories? This was an extension of the major lesson and equally interesting.

Mrs. Carl Milleon, chairman, presided over the business session. She reported on the Wisconsin tour which she and Mrs. Dale Heaton took.

Mrs. Donald Blimling and Mrs. Ivan Heaton were appointed to the nominating committee. On Monday, June 26, 1 p.m. the unit entertained the Merry Maids unit at a hamburger cookout and picnic at Nichols park. Mrs. Russell Heaton was chairman of the food committee and Miss Margaret Heaton, entertainment committee. The unit will meet July 11 at the Murrayville Methodist church. The 4-H girls will display their county fair exhibits. August 8, 6:30 p.m. is the date set for the family picnic in the Mur-rayville Park.

The September meeting will be with Mrs. Russell Heaton. Mrs. Cary Strang will present the lesson Meat That Never Moved a Muscle. Mrs. Ivan Heaton will give the selected subject.

Milovan Djilas: Rebel Remembers Tito, Stalin

BELGRADE (UPI)—At Number 8 Palmoticeva Street, in the oldest and quietest quarter of Belgrade, a slight, softspoken man just turned 61 sits surrounded by books in a modest apartment two stories above the street, and remembers.

Milovan Djilas remembers the old tribal wars of Montenegro; he remembers the beginnings of the Yugoslav Communist Party with a locksmith named Josip Broz; he remembers Stalin.

And he remembers the nine years he spent in prison for his writings after the world had come to know Josip Broz simply as Tito.

"I'm not afraid of prison any more," Djilas said in an interview. "The second term"—and he smiled saying the words—"was a very peaceful four years."

A Monk In Prison "Something changed inside me when I returned to prison. I was like a monk. I could have continued to the end of my life."

Dressed in a light knitted shirt and corduroy pants, Djilas frequently got up and padded about the room in his sandals as he spoke. He would pause for long moments, as if to meditate on his words and their effect on his listener.

It is more than four years now since Djilas—once Yugoslavia's vice president—was last released from prison after writing "The New Class," "Conversations with Stalin," and other works criticizing the Communist system. But he still retains some of the monklike habits he acquired in his cell at Sremska Mitrovica prison.

He rises at 5:00 a.m., and spends most of the day writing. He seldom goes out, and sees only a handful of friends either at home or in a small, out-of-the-way cafe in the quarter.

On his rare evenings at the theater, he sometimes runs into veteran party officials he knew

"when I was in power." Officials still afraid

"Until recently, the old party leaders boycotted me," he said. "Now, if we meet by chance, they may say hello, or even venture a few polite words about the weather. They are still somewhat afraid."

Djilas' long years of imprisonment and his current forced seclusion from social life have left him plenty of time for reflection of Communism, youth, and the future of Yugoslavia.

He made a lecture tour of the United States in the midst of the racial and antiwar upheavals of 1968. But Djilas, who was imprisoned as a young revolutionary under Yugoslavia's prewar royal government, said he was not much impressed by the revolution-minded youths he met in America.

"They talked about organizing the working class. I told them to be careful with the working class, which is not ripe for revolution in America. I predicted the SDS (Students for a Democratic Society) and other organizations like it would split up. They did," he said.

Partly because of his lecturing activities in the United States, Djilas is no longer allowed out of Yugoslavia.

"Only last week, they refused to give me or my wife a passport—for the eighth time," he said.

On a recent vacation at the Adriatic coast, the maids and waiters at his hotel pointed out to Djilas the secret police assigned to keep an eye on him.

Is Djilas' apartment bugged? "Even now, they are listening to our conversation," he told his interviewer.

To Djilas, such repressive measures are a sign that the Communist system which he helped organize in Yugoslavia is decaying. Djilas said he believes the "New Class"—the Communist bureaucracy—is now undergoing a crisis in which the material values typical of capitalist societies are replacing Communist ideals in Yugoslavia.

Old Ideals Forgotten "Nobody talks about the old ideals any more—just a few dogmatic professors," he said.

Along with rising regional nationalism and religious feeling among the country's six constituent republics, this lack of an ideology threatens the future unity of Communist Yugoslavia, Djilas said.

"Tito's influence is so great in this country that there is simply not any institution to replace him."

Djilas nevertheless believes Yugoslavia will somehow hold together in a post-Tito era, if only as a loose confederation. "Yugoslavia will survive," he said.

Djilas' literary life is not devoted entirely to politics. He recently finished the first Serbo-Croat translation of Milton's "Paradise Lost" (banned in Yugoslavia, as are all of Djilas' works), and is now working on a novel about his childhood in Montenegro.

"One day in 1924 my father, a Montenegrin tribal chief, led some men in killing the chief of another tribe. I asked my father why they had done it. He answered, 'We were crazy,' and laughed."

"The novel concerns this type of attitude in people."

Despite the restrictions on his life, Djilas said he is "practically content."

"I am not obsessed with this repression against me. I've lived this way for 15 years. Besides, I can still think freely."

Could he return to political life some day? "I have no ambition for power. Otherwise I wouldn't rebel as I do. Only some day, if needed by my country, I would answer the call."

Of one thing Djilas said he is certain: "I will never agree to shut up."

TRUST A TRYST to rear its pleasing head, war or no war. This one is at a beach at Da Nang, on the coastal north of South Vietnam.

Sometimes Hazardous

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS
NEW YORK (UPI)—A headlong into a glass patio youngster bats a homer in a door.
backyard ball game: the shattered window that results is a perennial theme for cartoonists. But it's no laughing matter when the same youngster runs for a high one — enough to make you take stock NOW of possible hazards from glass in your home.

More than 250,000 Americans are injured annually in their homes by broken glass in doors, windows, and other places. Half of them are youngsters under 15.

RANGED UP in the fighting near Chan Thanh, this South Vietnam soldier seems to be resting well.

There are many — sliding glass doors, storm doors, patio doors, structural doors with glass panels, glass enclosures for bathtub and showers. Running, falling, or even walking absentmindedly through a door glazed with ordinary glass can result in serious injury or death.

Potential tragedy is preventable. Make sure your home contains only safety glass or other unbreakable material in hazardous locations. And make sure, too, even with safety glass, large expanses of clear glass are marked — with etching, or decals, or some other attention-attracting device. Many an unwary person has tried to walk through a beautifully transparent sliding door and even a bump on the head is no fun.

Philip Mash, vice president of Globe-Amerasia Glass Co., Elk Grove Village, Ill., a company which pioneered the manufacture of laminated environmental and security glass, says homeowners generally do not realize the shocking dangers that exist from ordinary single-strength glass.

Changes needed
Such glass will shatter upon impact, sending shards flying to cut, and possibly blind, and leaving jagged edges threatening anyone who comes in contact.

For years, Mash said, major

That statistic alone should be enough to make you take stock NOW of possible hazards from glass in your home.

The model law was designed to be introduced in state legislatures and requires the use of safety glazing — laminated glass, tempered glass, wired glass, rigid plastic — in hazardous locations.

The CSGC has defined hazardous locations as any area where the glazing material is exposed to frequent physical contact by humans, specifically: sliding glass doors, storm doors, framed or unframed glass entrance doors and adjacent fixed glazed panels that might be mistaken for doors, bath enclosures and shower doors.

Currently, Mash said, only 22 states have legislation requiring safety glazing material. The law will be submitted in the remainder of the states this year, he said.

The glass accident problems, Mash said, stimulated the National Safety Council to investigate. Their efforts initiated a study conducted cooperatively by the U.S. Public Health Service and local state and health agencies. It found: Glasses injury victims were reported going from indoors to outdoors in more than 75 per cent of the cases. Had safety glazing materials been used, all the injuries could have been limited or prevented.

Safety study made
A Food and Drug Administration Bureau of Product Safety study of reported information from hospital emergency room records in 136 hospitals located in 33 states said: "Because of

A study of 100,000 glass door injuries, Mash said, found: —10,000 children suffered injuries to arm and wrist. —141 deaths per year were attributed to glass door injury. —More than 7,000 persons were hospitalized from injuries. —75 per cent of all injuries occurred to those under 18 years of age.

—More than 3,000 children were hospitalized for injuries of arm and wrist; lacerations of hands —second most frequent; lacerations of face —third most frequent.

Huge medical costs
Information collected, he said, indicates more injuries occur during warm weather months and approximately 50 per cent of the injuries occur in late afternoon or early evening hours.

Medical costs for glass door injury victims come to more than $13 million annually. While the efforts of industry, safety authorities and legislators are important, Mash said, it is obvious the answer now lies with the individual family in its own home.

Gas Stations, Cafes Shrinking

By MICHAEL J. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
It's getting easier to buy groceries at 3 a.m. in the United States, but harder to fill a prescription, buy a tank of gasoline or go out for a meal in the early hours.

A rising tide of supermarkets have switched in the past few months from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. hours to 24-hour operation, bucking a trend among other consumer facilities that threatens to remake America's big cities in the image of small towns that roll up the sidewalks at night.

A survey shows that while many more supermarkets are open all night, the number of all-night drug stores, gas stations and restaurants is shrinking.

And the new 24-hour operations are being opened in suburbs, not in central cities. Their trade depends on the more mobile life style and lower crime rates of suburbia.

Last year, four per cent of the 35,000 supermarkets with over $500,000 business a year were open all night, mostly on the West Coast where such operations began several years ago, according to Bill Bishop, head of research at the Super Market Institute.

But in the last six months in the Midwest and the last two months on the East Coast, the number of chains with 24-hour operations has grown so fast that no up-to-date figures are available.

Dominick's, Jewel, and Red Owl food stores in Illinois and Wisconsin are trying 24-hour operations at selected stores.

Food Fair is putting 45 of its supermarkets in Philadelphia on 24 hours. The largely suburban Pathmark chain in New York, New Jersey, Delaware and Pennsylvania has had 92 of its 96 supermarkets open 24 hours since May 7.

Some Safeway stores in the Washington area have gone to 24-hour operation.

Wrigley's put 14 stores in the Detroit suburbs, 5 in Ann Arbor and 5 in outlying Michigan cities on 24-hour operation June 14.

One Pathmark store on Long Island recently had enough business at 1 a.m. to keep nine checkout lanes busy.

What kind of people shop at 3 a.m.? The store owners say they get a cross section—people avoiding the late afternoon jam in the store and on the highways; families with a car available for shopping only at night; women whose husbands are home from work taking care of their children; someone who needs milk or aspirin in an emergency; partygoers buying snacks sometimes several times during the night; men coming off late work shifts; families that want their whole day free for recreation; and, even, some insomniacs.

The national trend for gas stations is the opposite.

A spokesman for the Society of Independent Gasoline Marketers of America said surveys of the society's members in 1967 and 1970 showed an 11.5 per cent decrease in the percentage of stations open all night.

In drug stores, although no national figures are available, the cutback trend appears just as great.

Charles Sandler of the National Restaurant Association said that if any trend is apparent, it is toward restaurants that serve one meal.

A Water Expert Warns Of The Threat From Salt

By DICK KLEINER
LOS ANGELES (NEA)—Almost everybody is worrying about water. The public is concerned about what the phosphates from detergents are doing to our water supply, and about sewage and industrial wastes. But one of the country's leading water experts has a bigger water worry—he's concerned about grains of salt.

Arthur F. Pillsbury is director of the Statewide Water Resources Center of the University of California. And he says the biggest problem with water today is the ever-increasing salinity of our streams, particularly those west of Kansas.

If the trend continues, he foresees a national calamity—"the economy could fade away," he says—because as the water becomes brackish, it becomes unusable for irrigation.

Pillsbury explains that there is always some salt in our streams and rivers, picked up as the rainfall flows over rocks en route to the river. Ordinarily, the salt is carried away to the lake or ocean the river flows into.

But man is interfering with nature's way. In this case, man isn't doing anything like throwing banana peels or tin cans into the river. Man is only using the water, and using it more and more as he becomes more numerous.

The more people there are, the greater the percentage of water that is put to use. And that leaves less flowing water to carry off the salt. That's what is happening now, and the rising salinity of our rivers is the result.

Pillsbury says some small valleys in Arizona have already gone down the drain. He says the Salt and Gila River basins in Arizona are in trouble. But by far the biggest danger is to the San Joaquin Valley of California, especially the Tulare Basin.

That area produces one-third of California's agriculture, and agriculture is California's biggest industry. Pillsbury says that if something isn't done to reverse the trend, the agricultural output of the Tulare Basin could be "seriously diminished" in 30 to 40 years, and the entire state's economics could suffer as a result.

Pillsbury says the salinity problem is currently affecting large areas of Arizona, New Mexico, the western half of Texas, parts of Nevada, Utah and Colorado. And it could crop up everywhere.

He feels this question takes precedence over the more popular water causes—detergents and sewage and industrial waste.

"There's too much hysteria and too much precipitous action," he says, "in all these areas. You must remember that water pollution isn't new—the streams of the United States were more polluted before the white man came, because the buffalo used to wallow in them."

He feels that the current campaign to remove phosphates from laundry detergents, as a cause of pollution, is wrong, although many other water experts disagree with him.

He believes that phosphates are "definitely a resource," and that their presence is necessary in the ocean. They contribute to algae growth, and algae start the aquatic food chain. As it is, he says, the oceans are becoming "a nutritional desert," and more phosphates would be "all to the good."

Besides, he says, the non-phosphate substitutes are not as effective and are more dangerous.

"I'm opposed to measures to take phosphates out of detergents," he says. "The substitutes are poorer and more dangerous—they're really nothing more than the old sal soda and washing soda people used to use, which are caustic and dangerous."

It is, however, the salinity problem that troubles Pillsbury the most. He thinks somebody better think of something, before all our rivers become flowing salt-cellars.

FROM THE SIZE of the garbage can, apparently Fredric L. Mill is expecting a lot of it at his El Paso, Tex., home.

NO LEFT TURN, NO RIGHT TURN, no turn at all is the situation on Rome's Via Della Conciliazione during a transit strike. That's St. Peter's Basilica back there.

For Nixon In November Race

By DONALD FINLEY
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Time is beginning to run out on President Nixon's effort to get unemployment rates down to a more reasonable level before the November presidential election.

When Nixon took office in 1969, joblessness was at a 20-year low of 3.3 per cent. It began climbing in 1970 and for the past 19 months has ranged from 5.8 to 6.1 per cent, stubbornly defying administration efforts to bring it down.

Early last year the President predicted that his economic policies would reduce unemployment to 4.5 per cent by the middle of 1972, well in advance of his re-election campaign. Joblessness continues to hover near 6 per cent, however, giving Democrats a potentially potent campaign issue.

The administration has abandoned any hopes of reaching the 4.5 per cent unemployment goal by November. But with the economy beginning to pick up, prospects are good for some improvement that might blunt Democratic criticism.

Employment Increasing
While the unemployment rate has proved difficult to reduce, the number of working Americans has continued to rise as more people enter the job market. Total employment increased 2.3 million in the past year to a record 81.4 million.

Administration officials contend the trend cannot continue because "eventually, you run out of people." They say that when the number of workers begins to level off, the jobless rate will fall.

There were 5,092,000 unemployed in May when the jobless rate was 5.9 per cent for the third consecutive month.

(This is the seasonally adjusted figure. There were actually 4,344,000 listed as unemployed in May, but this figure was revised to reflect the usual big jump of more than one million in June when schools let out. The seasonal adjustment process levels out these big monthly variations to provide a more uniform jobless figure from month to month.)

On either basis, the trend is being watched closely by both Republican and Democratic strategists because the plight of unemployed workers can influence the political attitude of relatives and friends as well as their own votes.

In addition, most union leaders oppose the President's re-election and can be expected to cite the unemployment rate in urging their members to vote against him. How many will take that advice is another matter, of course.

One politically important category of jobless workers is teen-agers, who will be voting for federal candidates for the first time this year now that the voting age has been lowered to 18.

In May, 15.7 per cent of the teen-agers seeking jobs were being watched closely by both Republican and Democratic strategists because the plight of unemployed workers can influence the political attitude of relatives and friends as well as their own votes.

Franklin School Board Orders Summer Repairs

FRANKLIN — The Board of Education of Community Unit School District No. 1 at a recent meeting hired Custer Brothers of St. Louis to inspect the burners and controls on furnaces in the three buildings in the school district. They were also employed to make changes on controls on the furnace at the high school building to comply with the Illinois Safety Code.

Miss Kristine Woods, recently hired as Unit Band and High School Chorus teacher for next year, has been tentatively employed to arrange for summer band practice for both high school and elementary students. The program will be put into effect if enough interest is shown by the prospective band students.

A six weeks Reading Program has been organized, beginning June 19, with more than thirty pupils enrolled. Mrs. Dee Anne Kingston and Mrs. Mary Ellen English, have been employed as teachers for this project.

Robert L. Baker, C.P.A. of Decatur, Illinois, has been employed to do the school audit this summer.

Mrs. Harlan Ryan, a cook at the Franklin High School cafeteria, has accepted the position as supervisor to replace Mrs. Bessie Seymour, who retired at the end of the school term. Mrs. Ryan will begin her duties on or about August 28.

Permission was granted to change textbooks in high school Advanced Algebra and in Geometry, due to the age of the replaced textbooks.

At a previous meeting, Wyman Deck of Girard, Illinois, was employed as Unit Librarian to replace Mrs. Jean Kloppe.

Mrs. June Bradish of Jacksonville was hired to replace Mrs. Linda Curtis as an elementary teacher at Franklin Grade School. W. O. Boatman of Franklin was employed as janitor at the Franklin High School to fill a position that had been filled on a temporary basis for several weeks. Mr. Boatman will assume his duties the latter part of June. Realignment of work schedules and rates of pay was effected for four full time service employees of the district, namely — Milton Calhoun, Ralph Long, A. B. Caldwell, and Wallace Schildman.

New lighting fixtures have been installed on the high school baseball field, and will be used during the summer by the Little League and Pony League teams. High School night games will be played when the school schedule opens in September.

Jobless in HHH States

Unemployment is concentrated mostly in states that went for Hubert H. Humphrey in 1968 and thus may not make as much difference in November since any backlash against the administration would tend only to increase the Democratic margin rather than reverse the trend in those states.

The 10 states with the highest unemployment rates are Alaska 12.7, Washington 11.1, Connecticut 9.4, Michigan 9.1, Montana 8.9, Maine 8.8, Massachusetts 7.9, Rhode Island 7.8, West Virginia 7.8 and Vermont 7.5.

Humphrey won all in 1968

except Alaska, Montana and Vermont.

The 12 states with the lowest unemployment rates were Colorado 2.9 per cent, Virginia 3.1, North Carolina 3.1, Georgia 3.4, Texas 3.5, Tennessee 3.3, Nebraska 3.3, Florida 3.8, South Carolina 3.9, South Dakota 4.0, Mississippi 4.0 and Arizona 4.9.

Nixon won all of them except Georgia and Mississippi, which went to Wallace, and Texas, which went to Humphrey.

This same trend is shown even more vividly in the 150 largest metropolitan areas.

The 10 with the highest unemployment rates (including Puerto Rico) all were in states that went to Humphrey in 1968. These were Muskegon-Muskegon Heights, Mich., 13.0; New Harrisburg, Pa. 12.6 and Dallas, Texas, 12.6.

Mass., 12.5; Seattle, Wash. 12.5; Waterbury, Conn. 12.2; Bridgeport, Conn. 11.8; Tacoma, Wash. 11.7; Lawrence-Haverhill, Mass. 11.2; New Bedford, Mass. 10.3 and Fall River, Mass. 10 per cent.

Only three of the 20 cities that now have the worst unemployment rates were in states that went into Nixon's Column in 1968.

But seven of the 11 cities with the lowest jobless rates voted for Nixon in 1968. They are Charlotte, N.C. 1.9; Austin, Tex. 2.0; Roanoke, Va. 2.1; Richmond, Va. 2.2; Durham, N.C. 2.3; Greensboro-Winston Salem-High Point, N.C. 2.3; Denver, Colo. 2.4; Jacksonville, Fla. 2.4; Washington, D.C. 2.5; Harrisburg, Pa. 2.6 and Dallas, Texas, 2.6.

Paint and varnish protect wood surfaces from the weather. And wood that is in constant proximity to moisture—fence posts, wooden outdoor furniture, door sills, outdoor steps—need more protection than either paint or varnish. Continued presence of moisture allows fungus to thrive, resulting in rot.

Any piece of wood that touches the ground or is in such a position that moisture will collect on it easily should be treated with a wood preservative.

Wood preservatives are varied and the well-known creosote, with its pungent odor and association with railroad ties, is not the only one and certainly not the best.

Creosote's chief virtue is its cheapness, which makes it good for fence posts where its flaws will not affect anything. Creosote bleeds through paint, so that it is not useful on surfaces that must be finished. It is very dark and it has an unpleasant smell that seems to last forever.

Shop around and you can find preservatives that do not bleed and which are a little more pleasant to use. While there are many trade names, a look at the ingredients will indicate the presence of such chemicals as pentachlorophenol, zinc naphthenate and copper naphthenate.

The first named is most common. These penta preservatives generally come in an oil base and the better ones will be clear.

Check instructions for painting. Chances are you will have to seal the preservative with shellac or aluminum paint.

Zinc naphthenate is generally clear and is used for sealing wood surfaces and for using on wood that will be varnished. Copper naphthenate is green in color and if the color bothers you it will have to be painted over. But it will need sealing first.

Whatever preservative you choose, remember that protection comes from having the material soak into the wood as much as possible. Brushing on is not as good as dipping.

Creosote will cause skin burns. Other preservatives, while not so caustic, will also irritate the skin of many people. Use with caution. Wear gloves.

Don't spray without a mask and glasses. Wash with plenty of soap and water if you come in contact.

GATEWAY TO EUROPE for increasing numbers of American travelers is Bangor International Airport. Being developed as a major alternative to New York's Kennedy and other congested metropolitan airports as a transatlantic departure and arrival point, it is a former Strategic Air Command base sold by the government to the Maine city for $1.

(Last in a Series)
By Dr. Willard Abraham
When the little boy lost his father in the tender play, "All the Way Home" (based on James Agee's "A Death in the Family"), he moaned to himself, "I won't see him tomorrow—or the next day—or the next day—or the next day." At the moment he desperately needed the security his young mother could give him.

When the deformed Philip in "Of Human Bondage" was badgered and taunted by the boys at school because of his "ugly foot," he needed acceptance and the assurance that his differences really weren't so important.

When the boys set out on their daring adventure in "Bless the Beasts and Children," they were in search of an accomplishment that could prove their value, to themselves and to others.

Each of us in our childhoods had personal needs which evolved from our own families, development, personalities, and other factors. Certain basic ones which most of us held in common also cropped to the surface. The three examples above are symbols of them.

They can be pulled together in this kind of principle: Every child needs the 3 A's of Affection, Acceptance and Achievement. Of course, he needs much more. Among the obvious ones of food, clothing, warmth and cleanliness. As basic as those needs are, however, children can die in many ways if their basic wants are met only by the stark requirements of keeping alive.

The "wolf child" in literature and chained children subject to what's referred to as the "battered child syndrome" manage to survive in less than ideal circumstances. So do some children of wealth whose parents might "follow the sun" of their own selfish restrictive dreams. The former show their scars externally; the latter bear theirs inside. Both might receive what's necessary for survival but may lack the 3 A's.

We often talk with too little knowledge of family life among disadvantaged or minority groups, not realizing that an enviable family style may successfully have been attained in their settings. Migrant, follow-the-crops and inner city families frequently find ways to satisfy the most important requirements for physical and psychological growth. Healthful child rearing is far from being a monopoly of the affluent.

The basic needs of children cut across economic and most cultural lines. Here's a selected list for you to check off in your own quiet time. What's your score on the 10 that follow as you apply them to your children?

1. Freedom to develop toward one's own capacities and encouragement to do so—whether it's tennis, reading, magic tricks, horseback riding or any of a multitude of other childhood skills.
2. Security, being cherished and knowing that one is loved; the unhappy experiences need not have lasting consequences. 3. Discipline, defined as clearly determined boundaries around exploratory, experimental activities and rules that the child both understands and was involved in developing. 4. Being liked, needed, wanted, appreciated by more than one's family. 5. Dependency decreasing toward independence, conformity accompanied by chances to be different. 6. Steady progress, in school, home and peer relationships. 7. Respect for authority that "makes sense" to the child. 8. Success, doing well in something important at frequent intervals. 9. Self-respect and an agreeable self-image. And then there's the 10th and among the most important needs of all, both from you and your youngster's point of view: A gradual cutting of the apron strings, loosening the silver cord more and more as the child pulls, strains and eventually tears loose. So difficult to accept—so important to work on.

Opening lead—♠ K

We have written about Howard Cushing of Newport before. Howard claims that he is the prototype of East in all bridge columns and today's hand finds him sitting right where he claims to belong. We don't know how he managed to get vulnerable. Probably John Crawford, who sat West, held some tremendous cards. As a matter of fact John held a pretty good hand this time.

He opened the king of spades and continued with the ace. Then he led the deuce. Howard had contributed his one face card at trick one and was down to spot cards only. His trumps appeared to be almost worthless and he had to use one right then. He carefully ruffed with the eight.

South overruffed with the jack and led the queen of trumps. Johnny took his ace right away and led another spade. Howard ruffed this with his nine spot and South's contract was doomed.

Howard had used his eight and nine of hearts to force South to use two of his high trumps and thus establish his partner's 10 as the setting trick.

Consider the Jim Beam half gallon:
(1) The World's Finest Bourbon Since 1795 costs less per drink.
(2) There's a handle on it. Easy to carry, easy to pour.
(3) There's less chance of running out; less need to run out for more. A sensible way to enjoy the Bourbon that has been a family art since 1795.

Upholstery Samples Make Those Patches

By POLLY CRAMER

Polly's Problem
DEAR POLLY—I hope someone can tell me how to remove airplane glue from a wool blouse. I have tried many things but with no luck. Thanks.—MRS. W.K.

DEAR POLLY—My 10-year-old son still needs to wear jeans with double knees but wears a size larger than they come in. I use scraps of that nice leather-looking fabric used so much for upholstery. Samples of it are bought at a neighborhood shop. These pieces are cut into the shapes of footballs, footprints, smiling faces, etc., and are finished off with the necessary lines and designs that

I put on with a permanent marking pen. I stitch these inexpensive and tougher-than-cloth patches on the jeans and they really make a hit with all my son's classmates.—JAN

DEAR POLLY—If you have trouble with eyeglasses making your nose sore where they fit over the bridge, put a small amount of deodorant on your finger and rub it on the spot. This will stop the sweating that usually causes the trouble. It works. I know.—MRS. M.M.

DEAR READERS — Do be careful not to get the deodorant too near the eyes and, if you use the spray kind, do not spray onto the nose but on a finger.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—Loretta asked for aid in cleaning out the inside of her pewter coffee pot. I found that running very hot water in the pot, adding two or three tablespoons of a detergent with enzymes and then letting it stand overnight absorbed all of the stains. Wash and rinse well and it should be bright and shiny.—MAXINE

DEAR POLLY—My solution for Loretta's pewter coffee pot that is corroded inside is to fill it with warm water and add a tablespoon of baking soda. Let stand until it cleans the pot. This deodorizes it, too.—DEBBIE

Business Mirror

By JOHN CUNIFF
NEW YORK (AP)—Pennsylvania insurance commissioner Herbert S. Denenberg suggests that flood victims in scores of communities in the East might consider suing their insurance agents and brokers for negligence.

"If agents want to assume the privileges and status of being professionals they must take the responsibility too," he said in an interview.

"As a lawyer," he said, "I think there is ample precedent to accuse them of negligence if they failed to tell their clients that flood insurance was available."

Such suits would be restricted to residents of communities in which flood insurance was available under a federal subsidy plan. While most communities are eligible, not all sought qualification under the program.

Action would be filed by individuals or by groups acting in a class action, in much the same way that professional negligence cases are being brought in increasing numbers against lawyers and doctors, he said.

Should such a concept find wide acceptance the consequences for agents, insurance companies and municipalities would be extraordinary, but it wouldn't be the first time Denenberg has provoked and upset the industry.

A Certified Life Underwriter and former professor, Denenberg earlier issued "A Shopper's Guide to Life Insurance," challenged the fees charged by hospitals and paid by Blue Cross and denied Blue Shield a rate increase.

The fact that flood insurance is available in many communities, and can be made available in others, has been described as the industry's best kept secret and least publicized product, but agents alone are not at fault.

Under the federal plan, communities may qualify for flood insurance, to be purchased by the property owners, by agreeing to certain land usage and property restriction clauses.

However, most communities have failed to take qualifying action. Denenberg said that of 5,000 flood-prone communities in the nation, only 1,200 are enrolled. Of 500 such communities in Pennsylvania, only 90 are qualified.

Moreover, either because the state's 30,000 agents failed to inform them or because they chose not to seek coverage, only 683 property owners were covered under the federal plan at the time the floods struck.

The blame, therefore, seems to be shared also by the federal and state governments for not publicizing the availability of coverage, and by municipal officials for not seeking to qualify, as well as by agents.

Many people apparently thought their homeowner policies provided flood coverage, Denenberg said. But, he added, if the insurance agent poses as a professional adviser, it would seem he has a responsibility to inform.

CARDINAL TICKETS GO ON SALE FOR PITTSFIELD DAY

PITTSFIELD — Cardinal baseball tickets are on sale at the Chamber of Commerce office for Pittsfield day at Busch Stadium in St. Louis, Missouri, on July 9. All business houses will be contacted for tickets and at the same time they will be asked if they care to make reservations for the annual Red Cross dinner meeting.

PERSONAL FINANCE

Inflation vs. Your Budget

By CARLTON SMITH
Figures showing that the typical family's living expenses increased more than 20 per cent over a four-year period may help to answer the budgeter's eternal plaint: "Where does the money go?"

To most consumers, such measures of living costs as the Consumer Price Index probably are too abstract to have much impact—but the dollar-and-cent figures for family budgets should give you a jolt. Latest calculations of the Bureau of Labor statistics—lagging six months behind today's costs—show:

Budget for an urban family of four, at an "intermediate" living standard—$10,971. That's up from $9,076 four-and-a-half years earlier, a 20 per cent rise. For a higher standard of living, $15,905 needed, compared to the earlier figure of $13,050—up 22 per cent.

The bureau's "lower level" budget was up 22 per cent, rising from $5,915 to $7,214.

Many families will find that, at midyear 1972, they'll have to spend even more to maintain the same standard of living. For one thing, these are national averages. As the National Consumer Finance Association points out, "equivalent budget levels varied widely among cities and regions, with the lowest in small cities in the South, and the highest generally in the largest metropolitan areas." So if you're not lucky enough to live in a small southern city, mark up your living costs by X per cent.

In addition, we've had half a year of inflation since these figures were compiled. The news about food prices, released by the Labor Department earlier this month, indicates that inflation is alive and—should we say "well?"—despite frequent official announcements that inflation is on its death bed.

Wholesale prices of farm products, processed foods and feed took a jump of 0.8 per cent (seasonally adjusted) in May—an annual rate of 9.6 per cent, a prospect that ought to shake up even the professional optimists.

To put the matter of family costs in context, there have been accompanying gains in personal income; otherwise we'd all be in the poorhouse. But currently, the N.C.F.A. points out, consumers are in the middle of a two-way squeeze. On one side is rising prices, on the other the fact that "taxes have been absorbing increasing proportions of personal income." Even when you get more, you're allowed to keep a smaller share to live on.

To illustrate what the combination of inflation and heavier taxes has done to family living costs in recent years, the N.C.F.A. cites figures of the Conference Board showing that $18,570 is needed today to equal the purchasing power of $10,000 of income in 1949.

During the intervening years, the bite taken out of that income by federal income and Social Security taxes increased by $2,100. At the same time inflation cut purchasing power by $6,470. Thus, $10,000 equals $18,570, and you can add to the latter figure whatever state and local taxes you pay. They're so variable that the Conference Board left them out of account.

What inflation's squeeze is adding up to currently is a good deal more than the price "budge" the administration said would occur after the freeze. You're likely to hear increasingly the complaint that Phase II isn't working, and demands for tougher policies and tougher enforcement.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP)—Stock market prices plodded lower Wednesday in dull trading that left many traders yawning on the sidelines.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials lost off 4.44 at 933.85.

Analysts said the downturn was partly the result of continuing investor concern over Britain's decision to float the pound and Sen. George McGovern's economic policies.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange slipped to 12.14 million shares, compared with Tuesday's 13.75 million.

The Big Board index of more than 1,400 common stocks fell 0.21 to 59.20.

Of the 1,742 issues traded, 514 advanced and 851 declined. There were 21 new highs and 131 new lows.

The Associated Press 60-stock average closed down 1.3 at 321.1, a new 1972 low. Industrials were off 1.8, rails were off 1.4, and utilities were up 0.1.

There were 118 blocks of 10,000 shares or over traded on the Big Board, versus a revised total of 100 Tuesday.

Utilities and rubber issues were up, and oils were mixed, but most other stock groups were down.

American Telephone warrants were most active on the Big Board, losing 1/4 to 6.

On the American Stock Exchange, the price-change index fell 0.04 to 27.20. Of the 1,158 issues traded, 328 advanced and 511 declined. Volume totaled 3.10 million shares, versus 3.44 million Tuesday.

In Over-the-Counter trading, the NASDAQ composite index fell 0.21 to 129.58, and the industrial index fell 0.51 to 139.29.

RED CROSS TO OFFER FIRST AID DATA IN PIKE

PITTSFIELD — As a service to the Pittsfield business community, the American Red Cross will devote its annual meeting, Monday, July 10, to information on first aid training, as required by the Williams-Steiger Occupational Safety and Health Act.

As the law now stands, both business and industrial firms are required to have one out of every five employees on the payroll trained to administer first aid in the event of an on-the-job mishap.

The Pike County Red Cross Chapter has arranged for Robert McCarter, ARC Safety Program expert, to come to Pittsfield to speak on the first aid training programs Red Cross can offer, free of charge, to local businesses.

The July 10 meeting will be held at Old Orchard Country Club and will include dinner at 7 p.m. Tickets, $2.85 per person, may be purchased from Miss Marjorie Nighbert at the Chamber of Commerce office, Miss Betty Kriegerhauser at the Pike Press, and Mrs. Geneva Wendler at the Red Cross office on South Memorial St. in Pittsfield. Deadline for reservations and obtaining tickets for this meeting is July 6.

Employers are urged to not miss this opportunity to learn what is required in the way of first aid coverage for employees.

NIXON NEWS CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon will hold a news conference to be nationally broadcast over radio and television from the White House East Room Thursday night, a spokesman announced Wednesday.

It will be Nixon's first session with newsmen to be broadcast live in more than a year.

The precise time for the news conference has not been set, press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said in announcing that it would be held "tomorrow evening."

Drifts Lower

LONDON (AP)—The pound drifted lower on Europe's confused money markets Wednesday. The dollar generally held steady at recently depressed levels, staving off the threat of a major monetary crisis.

At midday, the pound in London would buy slightly under $2.49, down from Tuesday's figure of $2.5150.

This meant an effective devaluation of roughly 4 per cent since Britain's decision Friday to let sterling float on international exchanges.

Floating means that Britain abandoned international agreements to keep the pound sterling within fixed limits compared to other currencies. Now the pound is bought and sold for the best price available under the laws of supply and demand.

Dealers said they believe the value of the pound will fall still lower when big speculators move into the markets.

At Olympic Trials

Spotlight On Ryun, Allergy

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — The spotlight will be on Jim Ryun and his allergies when U.S. Olympic track and field trials begin Thursday over the fast but wind-whipped track at the University of Oregon.

Ryun, the world record holder in the mile, 1,500 meters and half-mile, apparently has won his battle with mental fatigue but still is troubled with hay fever. There is something in this Oregon atmosphere that gets him to wheezing and sneezing.

Amateur health buffs from throughout the country have suggested cures ranging from diet to air purifiers in his hotel, but the Kansas star will be unable to lug any extra equipment around when he makes his bid for a trip to Munich.

Ryun will try to qualify in two events—the 1,500 meters and the 800 meters.

His sternest competition in the 1,500 meters is expected from Dave Wottle, the national collegiate champion, and Tom Van Ruden, an old rival in the metric mile distance.

Considerable attention will be centered on Steve Prefontaine, the boy wonder from the University of Oregon, who will seek a berth in the 5,000 meters. Challengers will include George Young, Tracy Smith, Jack Bachelier, Frank Shorter and Tom Laris.

Competition in the sprints, a perennial U.S. strong point, is considered wide open.

Eddie Hart, Warren Edmondson, Ivory Crockett, Herb Washington, Marshall Dill, Gerald Tinker and Mel Pender will shoot for the four sprint spots. Three men will go to Munich to run in the 100 meters and a fourth will go for the 400-meter relay team.

The 200 figures to be equally well contested, with Larry Black, Willie Deckard and Larry Burton joining the field from the 100.

The 800 field of Juris Luzins, Ken Swenson and Mark Winzenried is challenged by the 1,500 specialists as well as Rick Brown, Steve Straub and Willie Thomas, the surprise winner of the 800 at the NCAA meet here a month ago.

The 3,000-meter steeplechase also figures to be very competitive with James Dare, recent AAU champ with a lifetime best of 8:33.7, will face Sid Sink, the American record holder quickly returning to his old form; Mike Manley, the second fastest American in this event; Jerome Liebenberg, who has done 8:32.2, and Joe Lucas, NCAA champion and fourth fastest American with 8:30.2.

Evert Wins 1st Match At Finish

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Little Chris Evert won the hearts of British tennis fans Wednesday with a fighting victory in her debut in the Wimbledon Championships.

The 17-year-old prodigy from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., after twice trailing in the final set, beat Valerie Ziegenfuss of San Diego 1-6, 6-3, 6-3 in a surging finish.

A packed and excited crowd of 9,000 saw Miss Evert win her first match ever at Wimbledon. Millions more watched on television.

Chris' triumph highlighted a successful day for American players, but Clark Graebner of New York fell before an old rival, second-seeded Ilie Nastase of Romania, and popular, aging Pancho Gonzales bowed to a young Australian, Colin Dibley.

Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., a three-time Wimbledon winner, advanced to the third round along with Chris, beating Sharon Walsh of San Rafael, Calif., 6-2, 6-0.

Eight U.S. men and five women scored victories on this third day of the tournament.

The fantastic popularity of Wimbledon was undimmed by the absence of the World Championship Tennis (WCT) pros, including the 1971 winner, John Newcombe and top money winner Rod Laver. More than 31,000 fans poured into the All-England Club, and players had to fight their way through dense crowds to get to the courts.

Infield Single Lets Twins Top Angels By 7-6

ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Cesar Tovar's infield single, on which California third baseman Ken McMullen fell, drove in a run and gave the Minnesota Twins a 7-6 victory over the Angels Wednesday.

Tovar's roller scored pinch-runner Danny Monzon who had moved to second when pitcher Tom Dukes threw wild on a pick-off attempt and went to third on Steve Braun's single to left.

The Twins took a 2-1 lead on Bob Darwin's two-run triple in the first. They tied it 3-3 in the third on Harmon Killebrew's 10th homer of the season, moved ahead on homers by Phil Roof and Danny Thompson in the fourth and made it 6-5 on Killebrew's RBI single in the seventh.

California tied it at 6-6 in the eighth on Rich Reese's throwing error.

Bob Oliver singled home a California run in the first. Andy Kosco tripled in another and scored on a wild pitch in the Angels' third and Ken Berry hit a two-run homer in the seventh. Little League Boys Rewarded For Candy Sale

A total of 24 young men have been rewarded for the day for their respective Little League baseball teams, according to Elks Youth Committee Chairman Robert Jenkins.

To qualify for this acclamation, each player had to sell the most candy on his respective team during the Little League candy sale. Also, three other players were given the same acclamation because they had sold 90 boxes of candy or more, but were given not high sellers on their teams.

The boys from the evening league who received the honor include Bob Mabry, John Staker, Joe Beets, J. R. Middendorf, Jeff Turner, Jim Cooper, J. Farmer, Bill Dickerson, Dick Kaufmann, Jr., Kevin Kelly, Kevin Gibbs, Scott Saville, Mike Mayberry.

Afternoon league players who received the same honor include Pat Snow, Mark Robson, Scott Randolph, Archie Hunter, Kevin Pennell, Eric Perrine, Steve Doolin, Todd Stovall, Jay Bailey, Eric Huot, and Danny Chamberlain.

These Little Leaguers will be treated to a chaperoned St. Louis Cardinal baseball game "with all the trimmings" in the near future for their outstanding participation in the Elks Little League Candy Drive.

Joins Women's Lib Lady Ump Tells About Retirement

NEW YORK (AP) — "If they don't want women in baseball, then women should not go to games," Mrs. Bernice Gera said Wednesday in her first public appearance since ending her one-game career as the sport's first women professional umpire.

Asked if she was advocating a women's boycott, she replied, "Every woman should think for herself."

Mrs. Gera, admitting "frustration and disappointment with baseball," said she decided Friday that a game between Geneva and Auburn of the New York-Pennsylvania League at Geneva, N.Y., Saturday night would be her debut—and farewell—as a professional umpire.

"I decided after the umpire's meeting that I would resign after one game," the 40-year-old housewife from the Jackson Heights section of New York said at a news conference.

She said she knew after a six-hour umpire's meeting Friday that she was not going to get any cooperation from her colleagues.

Umpires must work as a team," said Mrs. Gera, "but I went onto the field alone. I had no partner."

Mrs. Gera was assigned as base umpire for the game, assigned work behind the plate, while Douglas Hartmayer was Hartmayer drove her to the game, Mrs. Gera said, but he refused to discuss signals with her, saying there "was nothing to talk about."

Hartmayer also appeared on national television recently and was critical of Mrs. Gera.

Mrs. Gera also said she didn't think she would have eventually gotten cooperation from the other umpires.

In her seven-inning umpire career, Mrs. Gera was involved in three controversial plays and ejected Auburn Manager Nolan Campbell, who argued after she had reversed a decision.

Mrs. Gera, who won the right to umpire after six years of legal battles, announced that she was joining the National Organization for Women and that she would work to get other women jobs in baseball.

As for her career, Mrs. Gera

Legion Shells Greenfield With 12-1 Edge

GREENFIELD — The Jacksonville American Legion baseball squad scored in every inning but the first and breezed by the host Legion team 12-1 in a seven-inning contest played Wednesday night.

Greenfield's lone tally came in the fourth inning against the Jacksonville team, which now boasts a 15-7 season record.

Brewers Edge Indians 4-2

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Left-hander Gary Ryerson scattered eight hits in his major league baseball pitching debut and George Scott drove in three runs leading the Milwaukee Brewers to a 4-2 victory over Cleveland Wednesday in the first game of an American League twilight doubleheader.

Ryerson settled down after giving up both Indian tallies in the second inning on losing pitcher Dick Tidrow's two-run single.

The Brewers, extending their winning streak to four games, their longest of the season, got a run in the bottom of the second on Mike Ferro's sacrifice fly, then went ahead to stay in the third.

Milwaukee added its final run in the seventh on singles by Theobald, Lahoud and Scott. Cleveland 020 000 000-2 8 2 Milwaukee 012 000 10x-4 6 0 Tidrow, Riddleberger (3), Henning (7), Mingeri (7) and Fesse; Ryerson and E. Rodriguez. W—Ryerson, 1-0. L—Tidrow, 4-8.

Expos Stick Blass, Pirates For 3-1 Edge

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Montreal Expos jumped on nine-game winner Steve Blass for a pair of runs in the first inning, then rode Bill Stoneman's eight-hitter to a 3-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Wednesday night.

The loss, the Pirates' third in a row, coupled with New York's victory over Philadelphia, dropped them into a virtual tie for first place in the National League East, with Pittsburgh four percentage points ahead of the Mets in the tight baseball race.

Cardinal Assault Sinks Cubs By 8-4

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A three-run outburst in the first inning and Ted Simmons' two-run homer highlighted a 15-hit St. Louis assault as the streaking Cardinals downed the Chicago Cubs 8-4 Wednesday night.

The Cardinals, winning their eighth National League baseball game in the last nine, sent Bill Hands down to his fourth defeat in 10 decisions with their opening uprising.

Lou Brock led off with a single and stole second with two outs before scoring on Joe Torre's single. Simmons then singled, Jose Cruz doubled for the second run of the inning and when right fielder Jose Cardenal's throw hit Cruz, Simmons also came home.

St. Louis added a run in the second on an error and Brock's double that kayeod Hands. Matty Alou made it 5-0 in the fifth with a double off reliever Dan McGinn.

The Cubs finally scored in the seventh on a pair of singles and Ron Santo's double play grounder but Simmons' sixth homer in the bottom of the inning made it 7-1.

Jim Hickman clubbed a three-run homer for Chicago in the eighth but the Cards added a final run in the eighth on Ed Crosby's double.

White Sox Shell Blue And A's 6-4

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox hammered Vida Blue for three home runs Wednesday, and beat the Oakland A's 6-4 on Carlos May's decisive two-run, bases-filled single in the seventh.

Dick Allen and Walt Williams hit solo shots and Tom Egan added a two-run blast before Blue was lifted with one out in the sixth.

Oakland tied the score 4-4 in the seventh on Bert Campaneris' double and Sal Bando's single.

The White Sox filled the bases in the seventh. Mike Andrews singled, and when Allen walked and the ball got away from catcher Dave Duncan, Andrews raced to third. Rick Reichardt walked, loading the bases. Darold Knowles replaced Bob Locker and May slapped a single to right center.

The A's scored off rookie Dave Lemons in the second inning when Mike Epstein singled and Tim Cullen doubled. They added a run in the third as Joe Rudi beat out a roller and eventually came home from third on a wild pitch. Aaron's Homer Boosts Braves To 4-2 Victory

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Hank Aaron hammered his 653rd career home run in the ninth inning following Ralph Garr's infield hit, giving the Atlanta Braves a 4-2 victory over San Diego in the first game of a two-night National League doubleheader Wednesday.

Aaron connected off Mike Corkins, 0-3, and his blow gave the victory to Ron Schuler, 3-2, who went all the way on a five-hitter. The blow gave Aaron 1,992 runs batted in for his career, passing Lou Gehrig for second place on the all-time major league baseball list. Gehrig had 1,991. The all-time leader is Babe Ruth with 2,209.

The Braves tied the score, 2-2, in the seventh after Garr and Aaron hit one-out singles. With two away, Mike Lum singled to drive in Garr.

Hull's Contract Aids WHA Hopes

By PAT THOMPSON
Associated Press Sports Writer
WINNIPEG, Man. (AP) — The World Hockey Association, suddenly bolstered by the signing of superstar Bobby Hull, has no immediate plans of trying to merge with the National Hockey League.

"At this point," said WHA President Gary L. Davidson, "we aren't even thinking of a possible merger. I don't see how we could acquiesce to some of the rigid NHL practices."

"The National Hockey League is controlled by the 'Big Six'—the old established teams. We don't have a Big Six. Each of our 12 teams is starting out on an equal footing."

The WHA, which will start its first season in October, showed Tuesday it will have to be reckoned with, signing Hull away from the NHL's Chicago Black Hawks to coach and play for the Winnipeg Jets.

Harvey Weinberg, Hull's agent, clarified the 10-year contract Wednesday.

The second-leading goal scorer in NHL history receives $250,000 a year for the next five years and $100,000 a year for five years after that. With the $1 million certified check presented by the WHA Tuesday in St. Paul, Minn., Hull joined the WHA with a $2.75 million price tag.

Executives of the Black Hawks were expected to issue a statement on Hull's signing Thursday.

NHL President Clarence Campbell said any legal action would be handled at the club level.

"When they (the Black Hawks) review the situation and consult their advisers," Campbell said, "I'm sure they will take the appropriate steps."

"The league has no official status in this. Basically, the National Hockey League member clubs have done very well in the signing of their players. I'm unaware if there will be more defections—if that's what you want to call them—but I don't think this will have an appreciable effect."

Donald J. Regan, WHA general counsel, said he didn't think the NHL would have sufficient grounds for litigation. "His playing contract was signed in Winnipeg and is governed by the laws of Manitoba," Regan said. "If the Black Hawks and the NHL would like to sue the Winnipeg Jets in Winnipeg, I think they'll have a tough row to hoe."

On reported bonus clauses in NHL contracts, Davidson said, "A player may have a bonus incentive of $5,000 to get 25 goals but when he gets to 22 or 23, they stop playing him. "This past year, Bobby Hull scored 47 goals and then the Black Hawks said he should rest for the playoffs."

The WHA president, who was one of the founders of the American Basketball Association, also criticized the NHL policy of measuring the curvature of stick blades during playoffs and the number of ties during regular season play.

He said WHA rules will be published soon, and they will include a provision for a sudden-death overtime in all regular-season games.

The league's schedule also is to be released shortly, with the opening game of the 12-team league scheduled for St. Paul Oct. 13.

Cincy Leads All The Way For 4-2 Win

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Johnny Bench drove in two runs with a single and a double and Tony Perez clubbed two doubles and his 11th home run of the year Wednesday, powering the Cincinnati Reds to a 4-2 victory over San Francisco.

The victory, snapping the Giants' four-game winning string, kept the Reds atop the National League West.

Joe Morgan walked and scored his 64th run in 64 baseball games on Bench's run-scoring single in the first. Darrell Chaney's walk, pitcher Ross Grimsley's sacrifice and Pete Rose's single made it 2-0 in the second.

Perez led off the third with his homer as the Reds chased starter Don Carrithers, 2-5. Successive doubles by Bobby Tolan and Bench added a run in the fourth off reliever Frank Reberger.

San Francisco scored in the third on Jim Howarth's two-out walk and Chris Speier's eighth home run.

Grimsley 5-2, was lifted after Bobby Bonds led off the eighth with a ground-rule double. Pedro Borbon retired pinch-batter Ed Goodson and Speier on ground outs and Tom Hall came in and got Willie McCovey on a grounder to first.

Country Club Swimmers Win Over Quincy

The Jacksonville Country Club swim team stroked to its third straight victory with a strong performance against the Quincy Country Club swim team in the local pool Wednesday afternoon.

Jacksonville scored well in all age divisions in recording a 308 to 120 victory over the Quincy swimmers.

Coach Ray Fredericks commented after the win, "With our younger swimmers gaining more experience and our older ones starting to work harder in practice, we are becoming a much better team."

Petra Kooiker and Tim Rourke led the local squad with three wins each in individual events. Double individual first place finishers were Kathy Snow, Mary Lynn Rourke, Scott Ware, Judde Casler, Sherry Fredericks and John Bellatti.

Those scoring single individual first places were Eddie Flynn, Chuck Colburn, Dan Rourke, Vicky Fredericks, Liz Kaufmann, Bret Wade, Jean Coultas, Bobby Brooks, Cynthia Dooling and Jim Bauman.

Suzie Sullivan picked up three individual second place finishes while Bobby Brooks, Pat Rourke, Dan Rourke and Vicky Fredericks had two apiece. All the Jacksonville relay squads took first place honors.

The Country Club swimmers next face the Sunset team from Pekin at 11:00 a.m. and the Beardstown team at 6:30 p.m. on July 5.

Judge Lets Blalock Play Again

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — "It's just good to know that I can play golf, but I'm glad I've saved a little money," said an ebullient Jane Blalock said Wednesday, moments after an Atlanta judge granted her the right to practice her profession pending trial.

Janie, the pig-tailed fighter on the course as well as in the courts, was suspended May 31 for one year by the Ladies' Professional Golfers Association on charges of cheating.

She went to court in Atlanta, headquarters of LPGA, and was granted a temporary injunction.

Wednesday, Judge Charles A. Moya of the U.S. District Court made the order permanent until her $5 million anti-trust suit against the golf body is settled.

"I just can't stop grinning," said the 26-year-old golfer, taking a break on the practice green at the Winged Foot Golf Club, where she begins play Thursday in the U.S. Women's Open Championship.

Janie, an eternal optimist who went on the pro tour three years ago after teaching school for several years, said she would not have taken the case to court if she thought there wasn't merit.

"Deep down inside I feel I have a good purpose," she said. "To my knowledge, a year's suspension is unprecedented and I just decided I wasn't going to sit back and let them do this to me."

Janie said she had just come off a victory at the Suzuki Golf Internationale in Pasadena, Calif., when the suspension came for an alleged infraction at the Bluegrass Invitational in Louisville.

Jane gave a wry smile when asked if she thought any jealousy among golfers prompted the inquiry and suspension of the girl who was rookie of the year in 1970. Most Improved Golfer in 1971 and this year's leading money winner with $38,286.09.

As for playing golf during the temporary injunction, she said she believed most of the golfers on the tour really didn't know the details of the case, so rumors mushroomed.

"I've had good playing partners so far, though," she said, "and just enough friends to get me through."

Testifies For Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the National Hockey League Players Association told a Senate committee Wednesday that the common draft and the reserve clause are not equalizing talent among teams.

The comments by Alan Eagleson were confirmed in part by NHL President Clarence Campbell, who followed him to the witness stand before the Senate Commerce Committee.

That committee is considering a proposal by Sen. Marlow W. Cook, R-Ky., to establish a federal sports commission to oversee professional sports.

Eagleson told the committee, "I do not feel that an adjustment or the removal of the reserve clause will result in calamity."

He said the clause, which binds a player to the team that drafted him until that team is willing to trade or release him, is not doing its job of spreading out the available talent among professional teams.

"What could be more out of balance," he said, "than the Montreal Canadiens winning the Stanley Cup 12 times in the past 17 years?"

Eagleson suggested that Congress should perhaps do something about the reserve clause before the various players' association decide to strike to remove it.

Campbell said the common draft has not worked as well as hoped but contended it only needs slight modifications not an overhaul.

He said he had proposed a rule—which has been turned down by the club owners—to require the clubs to retain drafted players for two years. After that, the players would be either kept by the club, exposed to the draft a second time or be placed on waivers.

Campbell also told the committee the fledgling World Hockey Association which Tuesday signed Chicago Black Hawk superstar Bobby Hull to a $2.5 million contract, is going to hurt the minor hockey leagues more than the majors.

He said the WHA will have to use 17 and 18-year-old players immediately "they haven't got a good enough show," because the minor league players are not mature players.

Rookie's Hit Send Bosox By Tigers 5-3

BOSTON (AP) — Rookie Juan Beniquez' tie-breaking single capped a three-run Boston rally against Detroit's Joe Coleman as the Red Sox beat the Tigers 5-3 Wednesday night.

The defeat sliced Detroit's lead in baseball's American League East to one game over Baltimore, which beat New York.

Coleman, 9-6, was staked to a 3-1 lead but blew it in the fifth. Doug Griffin started Boston's uprising with a one-out double and Carl Yastrzemski tripled.

Reggie Smith singled to tie the score and then stole second.

He remained there as Rico Petrocelli struck out but Bob Burda was purposely passed, bringing up Beniquez. The 22-year-old shortstop, recalled from the minor leagues recently to replace the injured Luis Aparicio, spoiled that strategy with a single to right.

Aurelio Rodriguez singled home Detroit's first run off higher.

Orioles Top Yanks By 4-0
NEW YORK (AP) — Merv Rettenmund started a two-run fifth inning with a single and drilled a two-run homer in the sixth as the Baltimore Orioles whipped the slumping New York Yankees 4-0 Wednesday night behind Mike Cuellar's five-hit pitching.

The victory broke a two-game American League losing streak for the Orioles and extended the Yankees' longest losing streak of the season to five games.

Cuellar, 5-6, and Fritz Peterson, 6-9, were locked in a scoreless duel until the New York outfield hurt Peterson in the fifth. Rettenmund led off with a single and raced to third on Andy Etchebarren's single.

Peterson induced Cuellar to hit into a fielder's choice at the plate for the second out but walked Don Buford, loading the bases. Left fielder Roy White and center fielder Bobby Murcer then let Mark Belanger's fly ball drop for a two-run single.

In the sixth, Brooks Robinson looped a ground-rule double down the right field line and Rettenmund lined his fourth home run of the season into the left field seats.

The Yanks and the Giants continued their winning ways Wednesday night in Elks Little League action by notching easy victories.

The Yanks tallied four runs in each of its last three times at bat to drop the Orioles 12-9. Brad Anderson knocked a double for the winners while Jeff Waggoner earned the mound win in relief.

The Giants used a four-run second inning to post a 6-1 victory over the Braves. Bruce Baldwin led the victors at the plate with a roundtripper and a two-bagger while Rick Meado drove in the Braves' only run with a solo homer.

"I think we're getting more liberal," says E. J. "Zeke" Giorgi, a stocky, square jawed Illinois state representative. "We passed bingo last year and a state lottery isn't far behind."

Giorgi is among a small group of state legislators in capitals from Lansing, Mich., to Topeka, Kan., who almost every session attempt to sell their colleagues on the merits of a state lottery to generate badly needed revenue.

"It's either a lottery or $60 million in new taxes," declares "Bingo Bob" Traxler, Giorgi's counterpart in Michigan where a 17-year-old constitutional ban on lotteries was eliminated recently.

Six states, all concentrated along the eastern seaboard, have for several years reaped millions of dollars through lotteries, but only recently has the phenomenon received much credibility west of the Appalachian mountains.

Illinois and Michigan appear to be racing one another for the chance to become the first midwestern state to adopt the age-old game of chance.

Other states, including Ohio, Wisconsin, Missouri, Kansas and Iowa, have made numerous efforts to eliminate bans on lotteries from their respective constitutions, but so far all have failed to do so.

The movement, spurred by individuals dreaming of that stant millionaire and by rising financial problems in most states, is, nevertheless, still very much alive.

In Iowa, voters this November will be able to decide whether to remove a ban on lotteries from their constitution.

Ohio legislators this spring got a similar constitutional amendment on the ballot, only to have it removed a few days before the primary by the State Supreme Court for technical reasons.

And in Illinois, where the new constitution has no such ban, a state lottery, which was expected to produce $100 million for the state, was approved by the House, but ran into solid Republican opposition in the Senate. Some supporters said that Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie, a Republican, sent out the word to block the legislation because he did not want to have the bill before him in an election year.

"If it would have been after the election," said one senator, "it would have passed."

The popularity of a lottery in many of the larger states reflects the strong desire by many people to gamble. Although gambling generally is illegal across the midwest, many states have over the last few years legalized bingo on a limited basis.

Even where gambling is illegal, police departments often ignore widespread bingo games, raffles and local draw-lottery would open the state to widespread gambling by declaring, "we're already in the gambling business. We're in horse racing and drawing for cars is done in almost every little town in the state."

Lottery backers in the Michigan general assembly say the underworld takes between $50,000 and $75,000 a week from the numbers houses in Detroit alone.

"If we can develop a lottery into a twice weekly affair with 50 cent tickets, the state could muscle in on organized crime's chief money maker," declares one Michigan legislator.

The other major argument is that a lottery funnels millions of dollars into state coffers without a tax increase. In most states the proceeds would go to finance primary schools, which are in serious need of funds.

"A lottery is one way of bringing in new revenue rather than going into everybody's pocket with taxation," says Missouri Rep. Earl L. Schief. His lottery bill was defeated this year because, he says, "They were afraid of voting for something like this in an election year."

Election year or no election year, the fact remains, that the idea of the state fostering gambling—even if it is strictly controlled as a state lottery—is abhorred by many persons.

In Michigan, the State Council of Alcohol Problems, which has roots in the early temperance movement, and a large group of clergymen have led the opposition.

Although the Democrats in the Illinois Senate have enough votes to pass the bill, its sponsor said he needed at least five Republican votes because of strong opposition from downstate "Bible Belt" legislators.

State lawmakers in Topeka, Kan. and Springfield, Ill., alike have rejected a lottery because they fear it will "make us another Nevada."

Wilsons to mark 50th anniversary at Mt. Sterling

MT. STERLING — Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Wilson of Mt. Sterling will observe their 50th wedding anniversary Saturday, July 1st with a family dinner to be held in Jacksonville. On Sunday afternoon, July 2nd, the couple will be guests of honor at an open house and reception in the Fellowship Hall of the Mt. Sterling First Christian church. They will receive friends between 2 and 4 o'clock.

The former Wilma Snyder, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Snyder, and Lewis Wilson, son of the late John Wilsons, were united in marriage July 4, 1922 in Mt. Sterling by the Reverend H. W. Talley, minister of the First Christian church of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hetrick, brother and sister-in-law of Mr. Wilson, were attendants to the couple.

Mr. Wilson is a retired U.S. civil service employee and Mrs. Wilson is a retired teacher. They are the parents of two sons, Boyde S. of North Chicago and Norbert L. of Peoria. They also have three grandsons and one granddaughter.

The Wilsons' sons and families are hosting the affair. The couple requests gifts to be omitted.

Goodman Playing Great Clarinet

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Lots of people are saying that on Benny Goodman's latest record, the double LP, "Benny Goodman Today," on Decca, Goodman is playing clarinet better than he ever played it. Jazz expert George Simon has singled out "Sweet Georgia Brown" on the album as the best of the best.

What does Goodman think about it? "Sometimes I think I'm playing better. I think it depends a great deal upon the circumstances and the people you're with and the environment of what is going on in your particular group. Sometimes you can establish it yourself. Sometimes you fall into it."

"This is a good record, though," Goodman practices his clarinet every day.

The recording, made in Stockholm, is with the 17-piece English band with whom Goodman made a month-long tour of Western Europe plus two concerts in Bucharest in early 1970. They played the Fletcher Henderson arrangements from the mid-1930s.

Goodman now is just back from Paris and playing with another group of European musicians. He played a concert to benefit the American Hospital in Paris, where American tourists in Paris go when they have an illness or a drug problem. Frenchmen can't deduct contributions to this hospital from their taxes, so Americans are the major supporters.

Goodman had heard the quintet he played with, who are Swedish, on records only, before he chose them to be his group. When he arrived in Paris, he found out the record was 10 years old and two of the musicians had changed, which scared him. But by the second rehearsal, everything was going fine.

"The piano player was a devotee of Teddy Wilson and the man who played vibes—Lionel Hampton was his hero," Goodman says a lot of people think a jazz instrumentalist is a jazz instrumentalist, but not so. One who would fit in with the style of one band leader could never play to suit another. "It's like they say in racing, there are horses for courses."

Since he has been back in the U.S., Goodman has been to Chicago, where he was born in 1909, to do some talking. He studied music, as a boy, in a synagogue, at Hull House, in school and with private teachers. Now that Chicago has decided to curtail funds for music instruction in public schools, some people opposed to that move asked Goodman to come to Chicago and say what he thought.

He says, "You find out they waste more money than the whole music program costs. I had a lot of interviews out there. I started my music career in the public schools. All I said is that something you could get 40 years ago is not being able to be gotten right now, with all our added affluence."

When he was still very young, Goodman used to sit in with black bands performing in Chicago and when he was 16 he was hired by Ben Pollock. He formed a band in 1934, which was first called a swing band in 1935.

Goodman has been known as the King of Swing ever since. His famous trio was himself, Teddy Wilson and Gene Krupa.

Goodman was the best-known band leader of the big band era. His arrangers were famous, Fletcher Henderson, Horace Henderson, May Lou Williams, Jimmy Mundy, Spud Murphy, Eddie Sauter, and so were his players—Harry James left the Goodman band to form his own band—and so were his singers.

Talking about one of the singers, Goodman says, "Peggy Lee sang with more voice in those early days. I suppose singers were harder to find than instrumentalists. Any singer you like as a rule has a complete personality, has an individual style and taste and what not."

"A lot of singers don't know what is good for them or don't have any special songs. They say they'll sing anything. I'd ask them, 'Isn't there something you'd feel more comfortable with?' The good singers know. Peggy always had a good idea of what she wanted to sing, a good sense of what was fitting for her."

He enjoyed leading a band, Goodman says. "It takes time for a big band to get into a groove. It's awful hard to put one together in half an hour. The best results are gotten when you put a band together, play for a few weeks, on tour or at a steady job and then record. By that time, everybody knows what they're doing."

"We've traveled by private railroad car, which is pretty fancy. And we had sleeper buses on the West Coast sometimes." Does he miss touring? "No, not now. I don't mind it."

for a certain length of time but after that, it's pretty harrowing. I guess Duke's band tours 365 days a year. Well, to each his own."

This year, in the 67th consecutive season of Naumburg Orchestral Concerts on the Mall

After that, I'm going fishing for a week. Then I have something in Tennessee, a private party I think. Then I'm playing with the New York Philharmonic, in Ames, Iowa, both jazz and classical. It'll probably be Weber's concerto, which I've made a record of with the Chicago Symphony. I'll also play in a jazz festival in Stockton, Calif."

Goodman answers an inevi-

"It goes on and on. Really something isn't it? I guess there must be some validity to it. I was listening to some old records the other day. They aren't bad."

Another season of barn, garage and tag sales is upon us and many amateurs will find little treasures that are bargains.

But many people acquiring antiques and lovely old-fashioned home furnishings aren't really sure how to clean, repair or store their new acquisitions, even though tender, loving care is necessary to keep great cabinetwork and other treasures looking fit for their age.

A timely book, "The Care and Keeping of Antiques" by Epsie Kinard, provides some answers that may help new collectors preserve things of value. Here are some of her suggestions about furniture:

Country pine, poplar and oak, if dry and unsealed, require oil plus rubbing for an oil-rubbed

This may be accomplished with a recipe used by conservators at the Brooklyn Museum to clean and shine furniture: one-third vinegar, one-third turpentine, one-third boiled linseed oil. Apply mixture with a damp cloth, keeping in mind that linseed oil has a darkening effect and should be wiped off within a short time. Many wipings are necessary to make sure there is no residue, unless one wants to darken the piece. Linseed concoctions should always be used sparingly.

it with a oil cloth and rub it on with a circular motion. After wiping off paste, polish it with an old nylon stocking. For a light cleaning of surface soil, a household spot remover may be wiped on and removed instantly.

Damp cloths should not be used on lacquer to clean smudges or fingerprints as a wooden base may swell and reject the lacquered surface. Many lacquered pieces have paper foundations which might cause peeling if water is used. Mahogany, walnut, rosewood,

After repairing such a piece with a wax filler, liquid or solid, the furniture should be waxed sparingly with a hard paste wax and rubbed with flannel. A thin coat of wax and much rubbing will do the trick. (Hand rubbing provides the most beautiful patina.)

Marquetry, the little inlaid designs one finds in some old pieces of furniture, can be kept from becoming bone dry by lubricating and cleaning them now and then with a little olive oil. Apply it with a cotton

Wicker: Antiques made of natural unpainted willow twigs may be cleaned by mixing a tumbler each of peroxide and vinegar into a pail of water and applying it with a sponge. Rinse it with clear water. Let dry thoroughly before using furniture. Clean painted furniture with a sponge and clear water several times a year. Wetting down wicker furniture—painted and unpainted—once a year with a garden hose Bamboo or bird's eye maple that has been turned and carved to resemble bamboo has been popular since the 1800s when these pieces began arriving from the Far East. It needs only regular dusting and a light waxing occasionally to deter marks and stains.

Cane should be dampened once a month during the steam heat season to counteract dryness. Let dry before using Washing furniture: Some people frown on using soap and water on fine furniture, others believe it provides a fresh look. Experiment on a small spot. If the spot turns white, do not use the following method of cleaning.

First remove wax with mineral spirits or synthetic turpentine and proceed at full speed to squeeze a sponge almost dry of suds mixture made

Water and vinegar on nearly dry wood should be avoided but a dry brush that is covered with a dry washcloth. Let furniture stand 24 hours to dry before re-waxing.

Insect infestation may be spotted when tiny mounds of colored powder are observed under an old piece of furniture. These might be controlled with household insect sprays aimed directly at the holes. Or an exterminator might be consulted.

The Dead Sea Coming Alive

By JOHN BONAR
DEAD SEA, Jordan (UPI)—The Dead Sea is coming alive again for Jordanians.

For the first time in five years King Hussein's subjects can soak and float—and never sink—in the salty waters of the lowest spot on earth.

After the 1967 Arab-Israeli War, Palestinian guerrillas took up positions in the hills between the Dead Sea and Mount Nebo, where Moses ended his 40 years of wandering with the Children of Israel.

As a result the area was placed out of bounds to civilian Jordanians. Last year, however, Hussein's Bedouin army cleared the vast majority of armed guerrillas out of Jordan and this spring the army lifted restrictions on access to the Dead Sea.

Lowest Basin

The River Jordan drains into the 45-mile-long sea, which lies in the deepest depression on the face of the earth. At its surface, the Dead Sea is more than 1,200 feet below sea level.

Evaporation loss in the high temperatures of the Jordan Valley—they can reach 120 degrees Fahrenheit—totals 5.5 million tons a day. The result is the sea is so heavy with salt and minerals, it is impossible to sink, which is just as well since it is 1,000 feet deep in places. Fish cannot live in the sea and birds do not fly over it.

For all of its length, the sea serves as the cease-fire line between Jordan and Israel's occupying forces. Nine miles of water separates the two sides.

A Popular Resort

Jordanian workers have laid a hard-packed dirt road to the northern end of the Dead Sea and every weekend now hundreds of Jordanians make the trip to lounge on its beaches.

Just two miles along the coast and clearly visible to the Jordanian swimmers is the Dead Sea Hotel. Until 1967 it was part of Jordan. Now it is in Israeli hands.

Said Tarek Abul Huda, from Amman: "Before 1967 I regularly visited the Dead Sea Hotel. This is the first time I have come to another part."

He added: "It is the first time that my six-year-old daughter Suha has been able to visit the Dead Sea at all."

Among a number of valuable tourist sites is Khirbat Qumran, where the Dead Sea scrolls were discovered.

On the Israeli side of the sea a hard-surfaced road has been driven down its entire length. Jordan has only a rough track passable by donkeys and small trucks.

But among plans which aim to bring Jordan back into the tourist business are a road down the eastern bank, a hotel and rest facilities near Suweimeh on the northeast coast and a cleaning operation to remove deadwood and debris from the beaches on the eastern side of the sea.

The dirt road has only just been finished but already keen merchants have set up stalls selling cakes and fresh fruit.

ASHLAND MEMBERS ATTEND ANNUAL FFA CONVENTION

ASHLAND — Twelve members of the Ashland FFA Chapter attended the 44th annual convention of the Illinois Association FFA held at the Assembly Hall, University of Illinois, for three days. Six members were selected for the State Chorus and four members served in the Usher Corps.

Chorus members were: Scott Campbell, Eric Adkins, Bill Schutz, Russell Ridder, Rick Lynn and Jeff Cosner. Gary Smith, Jim Mahoney, Tom and Bob Johnson were members of the Usher Corps. Mr. Donnan served as assistant co-ordinator. Chapter president John Spradlin and secretary Ron Jurgens were the Chapter's official delegates.

The Ashland FFA chapter received the Bronze Emblem award for its program of Activities in state competition. There were 13 Gold Emblem Chapters, seven Silver Emblem chapters and 28 Bronze Emblem chapters out of some 435 chapters in the State of Illinois.

Ron Jurgens was elected Section 14 Reporter at the annual sectional meeting.

FAREWELL DINNER FOR CASS FAMILY

ASHLAND — Sixty-two were in attendance at the farewell dinner held Sunday 12:30 p.m. in the church basement of the Church of Christ after the morning worship service in honor of Lynn Field and his family, who will be moving to Fort Myers, Florida, to their new home the middle of this week. Prayer was said by Willard Evans before partaking of the delicious meal.

Several scripture verses were read by Galen Winters, youth minister of the church who also offered prayer. Brother James Cook presented a gift from the church to Lynn Field, which was a picture of Christ on his way to Emmaus. A few remarks were made by Lynn "Blondie" at the closing of the meeting.

Woman Charged With DUI After Car-Truck Crash

A city woman was charged with DUI following an accident in the 300 block of N. West at 4:08 p.m. Wednesday. Evelyn J. Crawford, 51, of 330 W. Douglas was cited for drunk driving after colliding with a truck driven by Phillip J. Brown, 34, of route 4. City police stated the Brown vehicle was northbound attempting a right turn when it was struck from behind by the Crawford auto. Brown's truck was pushed over 100 feet by the impact, but received only minor damage. The Crawford woman was released after posting cash bail and her driver's license. In another accident at 4:10 p.m. two cars were moderately damaged at Morton and Westgate. Police said an auto driven by William R. Kemp, 25, of 120 Finley pulled into the path of another auto driven by Anna M. Stewart, 54, of Detroit.

Margaret Coe, Resident Of City, Dies

Mrs. Margaret Louise Coe, 504 N. Fayette, died at 6:15 p.m. Wednesday at her residence. She was 52 years old. Born in Jacksonville Sept. 7, 1919, she was a daughter of Elmer and Jettie Moss Barton. She married Sam Coe April 6, 1955. Survivors include the following: her husband, mother, two daughters, Shirlee Ann Haley of Jacksonville and Mary Catherine Gilbert of Davenport, Ia.; three stepdaughters, Mary Gossnell of Forest City, Virginia; Balaska of Davenport, Ia. and Margaret Kircik of Fort Collins, Colo.; one stepson, James William of Joliet; and nine grandchildren. Also surviving are three brothers, Albert Barton of Atlanta, and Russel Barton and Elsworth Barton, both of Jacksonville; and one sister, Dolores Staley of Bloomington. One sister, Clarabelle, preceded in death. Mrs. Coe had worked at Jacksonville High School, and before that at Illinois Braille and Sight Saving School. She was a member of the VFW Auxiliary. The body is at the Williamson Funeral Home. Arrangements will be announced.

Little Change In Fair Traffic

Jacksonville Police Chief Charles P. Runkel announced that there would be no change in the traffic pattern already in existence around the Morgan county fairgrounds except on Tuesday, July 4. On July 4th only, from noon on, Grand Avenue will be restricted to northbound traffic only, from W. State to Lafayette. No turns will be permitted from Lafayette onto Grand during this period. Parking will be as usual around the fair. Signs are posted where parking is prohibited. There will be no parking on either side of W. State from Finley to Grand Avenue.

Flea Market
A flea-market will be manned by the Jacksonville Band Parent Association on Monday, July 3 from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. at the Morgan County Fair in the Farm Museum (the light brown building). Mrs. Joseph Graham is chairman of this event and she asks all band students and parents to bring their knickknacks, white elephants, jewelry, vases and dishes, old bottles, books, flowers, handicraft items and odds and ends for this project. Baked goods, preferably brownies, cookies and banana and nut breads, will be accepted. No clothing, please. If possible, these items should be brought to the booth by 9 a.m. Monday to be ready for display.

Education Bills Moved By Illinois Senate

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The Illinois Senate gave main-line priority Wednesday to higher education, shipping out appropriations for Southern Illinois University, the Board of Regents and the Board of Governors. Without debate, all three bills for fiscal 1973 went back to the house, for concurrence in amendments. The amounts of the appropriations as moved from the Senate were approximately: SIU, $130.5 million; Board of Regents, $138.3 million; and Board of Governors, $115 million. Still pending on the Senate calendar is a $217 million appropriation for the Public Junior College Board. The University of Illinois appropriation moved back to the House more than a week ago. It was set near $291 million. In the event of disagreements, some items in the higher education appropriations probably will be settled by committees of conference between the two houses.

WINCHESTER — The fourteenth reunion of the 1932 graduating class of Winchester High School was held at the Blackhawk Restaurant in Jacksonville on Saturday, June 24. This reunion marked the fortieth anniversary of graduation from high school and was attended by twenty class members and eleven guests.

After dinner a business meeting was conducted by Ralph Hawk, chairman. Ralph Hawk, Lucille Summers and Lillie Mae O'Donnell were elected chairman, secretary and treasurer for the next reunion which will be held in 1974. A Planning Committee will be named later. Correspondence from Mancel Danford, Charles Barnett and Edna Markille Couch was read; also it was noted that a telephone call had been received from Mary Agnes Ryan Schwalbe.

Frances Hester Turner prepared a paper of some interesting highlights concerning the class from the time of entering high school until graduation. This paper was read by Ralph Hawk, Truman Scott, Jesse Jameson and Ben Green. Each member present gave a brief history of himself or herself and the remainder of the evening was spent reminiscing.

The Planning Committee for the reunion was Ralph Hawk, Harold Morris, Lillie Mae O'Donnell, Lucille Groce, Winona Evans, Martin and Frances Turner and Lucille Summers.

Present for the reunion were: Marianna Trickey Gibson and Mr. Gibson, Bessemer, Alabama; Jesse Jameson and Mrs. Jameson, Louisiana, Missouri; Floyd Priest and Mrs. Priest, Bridgeton, Missouri; Lucille Suter Simms and Mr. Simms, Petersburg; Loretta Suter Jennings, Springfield; Elmo and Elsie Bean Smith, Rochester; Velma Smith Walk and Mr. Walk, Joliet; Martha Evans Pratt and Mr. Pratt, Jacksonville.

Lucille Groce, Winona Prather Evans and Mr. Evans, Martin and Frances Hester Turner, Mary Roosa Pennell, Ralph Hawk, Ben Green and Mrs. Green, Lyla Ryan Brown and Mr. Brown, Truman Scott and Mrs. Scott, Lillie Mae Coughlin O'Donnell and Mr. O'Donnell, and Lucille Balke Summers, all from the Winchester area.

Ogilvie, Walker Asked To Debate At Knox College

GALESBURG, Ill. (AP) — Knox College has invited Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie and his Democratic challenger, Daniel Walker, to debate at one of the seven sites of the famed Lincoln-Douglas debates.

A spokesman for Walker agreed to accept the invitation, proposed for Sept. 28 to coincide with a big crowd-drawing farm show in Galesburg.

Ogilvie's spokesman said his staff is considering about 100 invitations to debate and that there would be no immediate answer to the Knox College invitation.

Abraham Lincoln debated Stephen A. Douglas at the college Oct. 7, 1858, in their campaign for a U. S. Senate seat.

By JOHN B. MARTIN

The carcass class showing for the Morgan County Fair got underway with the judging in the show ring Wednesday evening.

A 17-year-old Meredosias lassie showed her Yorkshire cross-breed to win top honors before an interested crowd. Charlotte Tegeder, a senior at Meredosias-Chambersburg High school herded the winner into a corner, a feat won by her brother a year or so ago.

Charlotte is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daryle Tegeder and hogs are big business on the family farm.

The Hynes family from northwest of Jacksonville walked off with second, fourth and fifth places. Ken, Rock and Mick, respectively, showed three fine animals and the boys are all sons of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Hynes. The Hynes family are all well-acquainted with the hog business too.

Third place went to a hog shown by Mark Adams who lives west of town.

Sixth place went to Donn Fricke; seventh to Terry Jones; eighth to Todd Burrus; ninth to Richard Johnson; and tenth to Todd Becker.

The ten top hogs will be shipped to the Oscar Mayer plant in Beardstown for processing. The winner after that inspection for loin eye and other meat qualities will be announced by Sunday according to the fair officials.

Welcome Rain Brings Some Power Outages

An inch of rainfall to the parched Jacksonville area was accompanied by lightning and resulting power outages affecting customers of Illinois Power Company early Wednesday.

Power lines to about a third of the customers in South Jacksonville and isolated instances in Jacksonville, Chapin, Concord and Lynnville.

All of the outages had been restored within two hours according to Illinois Power officials.

The official measurement at the WLDs cooperative weather station was 1.25 inches of rain. The rain was general, although reported as varied from about a half inch to slightly more than an inch in the surrounding area. There was no reported damage of a serious nature to buildings.

The city-county police network was knocked out by lightning for a period of about two hours, although emergency communications were restored within minutes to all cars.

SIU President Will Marry In September

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP) — David R. Derge, president of Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, will marry Patricia Jean Williams, an assistant to the state superintendent of public instruction, it was announced Wednesday.

Derge, 43, is a widower with an 18-year-old son and a 16-year-old daughter. This will be the first marriage for Miss Williams, 25.

The wedding is planned for early September.
